Reds Appear Shocked After Call For Showdown

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Stanley Johnson spent six years in Moscow and one in Poland and journeyed through Western Europe studying Kremlin policy and its impact. He discusses the possible effect on the Communist world of Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev's call for a showdown with Red China.)

By STANLEY JOHNSON

NEW YORK (AP) — The world's Communist parties seemed to be in a state of shock today, pondering their fate and the future of their movement in the wake of Soviet Premier Khrushchev's publicized decision to force a showdown with Red China.

Rack and ruin seemed to face some of them.

Khrushchev predicted that Red parties around the globe would rally to Moscow's side. But 24 hours after publication of his call for a world Communist conference to take up the Chinese issue, there was only a shaken silence in the Red ranks.

Division of the once monolithic Communist movement into two warring camps posed a whole new set of problems for the parties: It involved rethinking on a massive scale since obviously communism never could be the same again.

Adding to their confusion was publication of the news that three of their once-revered chiefs had been ousted from the Soviet Communist party.

If this can happen to former Premiers Georgi M. Malenkov and V. M. Molotov, to tough Stalinist former First Deputy Premier Lazar Kaganovich, what will be the fate of lesser luminaries at home and abroad who defy Khrushchev? (See photos, page 3.)

That question must have been in the minds of party leaders in both Communist and non-Communist countries.

It seemed obvious that party leaders were leery of saying anything until they could see Peking's reaction to the Soviet blast and meeting call.

The Red Chinese were silent, too, understandably, since it takes time to draw up a formal reply. But they produced one odd statement: Warm congratulations to the Hungarian Communist Party on the 19th anniversary of the liberation of Budapest from the Nazis.

This was a strange gesture because the Hungarians are the only ones who have yet pledged all-out support for Khrushchev and issued their own denunciation of Peking.

General feeling among those who follow Communist affairs closely was that the Hungarians had acted out of politeness because Khrushchev is a guest in their country.

What's upsetting many of the parties—and facing them with disaster—is the need for

'ONLY MIRACLE CAN SAVE MACARTHUR'

Condition Of 84-Year-Old General Worsens As He Slips Deeper Into A Peaceful Coma

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The condition of Gen. Douglas MacArthur worsened ominously today and the Army's surgeon general said it would be a miracle if he survived.

Lt. Gen. Leonard B. Heaton declined to say the 84-year-old military hero was dying. But he reported that MacArthur had fallen into deeper coma and that his heart, pulse and blood pressure continued to fail.

The morning medical bulletin at Walter Reed Army Medical Center said the ailing general "continues in a peaceful coma which is gradually deepening . . . the other major vital functions are becoming increasingly difficult to sustain."

In response to questions, Heaton used the term "ominous" to describe MacArthur's condition.

Asked about chances of recovery, the surgeon general confined himself to commenting, "miracles always can occur." And, although he refused to say death was imminent, the expert conceded "it's certainly not a matter of weeks."

Heaton said that the coma into which the old soldier lapsed yesterday was the result of liver failure. MacArthur also has developed a serious kidney malfunction. Heaton

LBJ Seems Back In Bipartisan Groove

By JACK BELL

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Lyndon B. Johnson is back in the bi-partisan groove, and it's all smiles again between him and Republican congressional leaders.

Proving that he is a man of no half-way measures, Johnson invited both Republican and Democratic leaders for a briefing by the National Security Council, the first ever to members of Congress.

The primary subject was Johnson's announcement that the United States and Panama had agreed to resume diplomatic relations and to discuss the Panama Canal dispute.

The conference brought Senate Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois back to the White House for the first time since Jan. 29. Rep. Charles A. Halleck of Indiana, the House Republican leader, would have been there, too, except that he was out of town and couldn't make it.

After the Jan. 29 meeting, which also dealt with Panama, Dirksen and Halleck let it be known they felt they were getting the silent treatment from the White House. They weren't being consulted, as they had been previously, about either domestic or foreign matters.

There was some speculation that the president was miffed about some of the harsh things Dirksen and Halleck had been saying about his handling of foreign policy matters.

When this state of affairs became public knowledge, Johnson reacted quickly. He met Dirksen at a banquet and hailed him as "my friend." He added that "you've always been my friend and always will be."

Then came the opportunity to have Dirksen and other Republicans summoned to the White House to sit in on the making of a bit of history.

Press Secretary George Reedy said the conference had been called "in accordance with the president's desire to keep leaders of Congress fully informed."

Everybody, it turned out, was happy about the experience of being included in what Johnson called a "truly great day for the American people."

Search For Two Suspects Pressed On Both Coasts

Search for two, fast-moving suspects in the slaying of 30-year-old Donald Glenn Corbett Jr. of Sausalito was pressed on both coasts today.

One of the suspects, now identified as Robert Lee Jones, was hunted in Marin County before the March 27 murder.

Sausalito police received a tip yesterday that the fugitives were back in the Bay Area. This was after they were reported in Miami Beach, Fla., possibly headed for South America.

Since the murder John Lee King and Jones have been traced on a week-long, cross-country spree using Corbett's credit cards.

Corbett, products manager for Foremost Dairies in San Francisco, was found stabbed and bludgeoned Monday in his apartment at 203-A Valley Street. The time of the murder was set at Friday night.

Jones and King disappeared from their Waldo Point houseboat and ark Saturday and were traced through Reno, Las Vegas, Los Angeles and Miami. They reportedly used Corbett's credit cards to rent cars and buy plane tickets and forged his name to hundreds of dollars worth of checks.

One of the men known as "Steve" was identified yesterday as Robert Lee Jones, an escapee from a Nevada State Penitentiary honor camp Feb. 16, where he was serving up to 15 years for armed robbery.

Police believe that Corbett's slaying is a part of a wild crime spree that began when Jones escaped from the penitentiary.

Sgt. David Cooper of the Sausalito Police Department said that law enforcement officers in the county were on the lookout for Jones before the murder.

Jones was being sought for hijacking two Sacramento taxicabs and kidnaping both drivers. He robbed one of the drivers, Virgil W. Stevens of Broderick, of his money and identification cards and was using the name "Steve" while living in Sausalito.

The men also have been linked to a burglary of a room at the Tomahawk Lodge, north of Novato, and the $420 holdup of a liquor store at Sabella's

Nervous, Pale Gunman Robs Hub City Market

A very nervous, pale gunman robbed Victor V. Turkan as he was closing the Center Market, 1119 San Anselmo Avenue, San Anselmo, of $77 at 9 p.m. yesterday.

Turkan, owner of the store, said he was moving a gumball machine inside the store when the man appeared from around the corner of the building and ordered him to "get inside," according to Sam Serio, assistant police chief.

"At first I thought it was a joke," Turkan said today, "but when we got into the store and he ordered me to open the cash register and give him the money, I knew he was serious."

Turkan was forced to lie face-down on the store floor and told to put his hands behind him. The 28- to 34-year old robber bound the grocer's wrists with adhesive tape, told him not to call the police until he got out of sight, and fled, Serio said.

Turkan freed himself quickly from the loosely tied tape and called police.

"I wasn't frightened until it was all over," said Turkan, who opened the store today as usual.

He described the robber as about five feet, seven inches tall, weighing 155 pounds and wearing a light blue yachting cap and a tan jacket.

"He had very dirty hands," Turkan added.

"He had just a regular face, no scare or marks, which I have never seen before and never hope to see again," he said.

$300 In Silver Dollars Stolen

More than $300 worth of silver dollars kept in two two-pound coffee cans were stolen yesterday from the home of Mr. and Mrs. Tauno Sjoblom of 1891 Marion Street, Novato, yesterday.

Mrs. Sjoblom discovered the burglary yesterday afternoon while cleaning house, according to police.

There were no signs of forced entry into the home which, according to Mrs. Sjoblom, was locked.

One Authority For Bridges Suggested

SACRAMENTO (AP)—Lt. Gov. Glenn Anderson says putting all San Francisco Bay Area bridges under one authority might increase the bonding capacity for new bridges.

He suggested a study of the matter yesterday, adding that he "strongly favors equalizing tolls on all Bay Area bridges."

Goulart Is Granted Sanctuary

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay (AP) — Joao Goulart, deposed president of Brazil, found sanctuary in Uruguay early today. The Uruguayan government said he would be received with state honors in the capital later in the day.

Goulart crossed into Uruguay with his brother-in-law Leonel Brizola, during the night and went to Brizola's 19,800-acre farm near the Brazilian border for temporary refuge.

Despite a severe rainstorm, Felipe Gil, minister of the interior, and Hector Gros Espiell, deputy foreign minister, took off in a plane during the morning on what they said was private business.

Shortly after Espiell said Goulart would be received with honors as ex-president of Brazil.

He said the nine-member governing council that rules Uruguay had agreed to receive Goulart "with full honors as a former president and good friend of this country."

This had the effect also of giving Uruguay's formal recognition to Brazil's new president.

Mrs. Goulart, who preceded her husband here said he intends to return to Brazil in time, but not to fight.

Milk Drivers Strike Looms

Threat of a strike of Bay Area milk drivers and dairy employees loomed today as negotiations between union representatives and employers continued in Burlingame.

Einar Mohn of San Francisco, head of the Western Conference of Teamsters, was authorized yesterday to call the strike. He is expected to enter negotiations today between the Northern California Milk Industry Labor Relations Assn. and Bay Area locals.

Locals No. 302, 296 and 226 authorized strike action earlier this week after rejecting employer proposals. The union wants a $2 a day wage increase and other benefits.

Special Account Sought In Budget

County Administrator Alan Bruce will ask in the 1964-65 budget for a new special account to cover costs of special community projects the county is financing or subsidizing.

He explained the idea yesterday during a discussion with County Superintendent of Schools Virgil S. Hollis on the county's share of the county schools office budget.

Hollis has placed a $20,732 item in his budget for a Marin City total education program. This program, if approved by the board of supervisors, would be operated by the Marin City Community Services District on a contract with the county.

Bruce noted that the program has aspects which could easily apply to the welfare department, the probation office or parks and recreations, and said some effort is going to have to be made to coordinate the various county departments concerned anyway.

There had been discussions earlier this year of putting the proposed program in the parks and recreation budget.

Bruce said the new catagory might include the Marin Council of Community Services Project for the Aged, now in the parks and recreation budget, and possibly others.

Hollis also asked for funds to renovate the facilities of the child care center operated in Marin City by the Sausalito School District. He said the district is expected to drop operation of the service at the end of this school year.

Hollis explained that the program is self supporting, thanks to funds supplied by the state, but that capital improvements are not covered and are badly needed for the facilities at Manzanita School.

Bruce cut the items out of the budget for the time being, saying the supervisors intend to discuss some payments to the Sausalito School District to aid it in coping with the problem of education in Marin City which supplies little assessed valuation to the district tax base.

Also killed out, for the time being, was a county jail education program, expected to cost $7,950. Bruce said he would like to see such a program started but that funds were short this year.

Hollis said he would keep it in as a request, and would bring in more supporting information.

The major other increase came in the program of educa-

13-Year-Old Kidney Girl Dies

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—A 13-year-old Sacramento girl, scheduled to undergo a delicate kidney transplant operation next Thursday made possible by a response of donors, died yesterday of heart failure.

Vickie Lee, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Lee, had undergone weeks of tests and studies for the operation at University of California Medical Center.

A public plea for donors to give up a kidney brought forth 47 volunteers and one had been selected.

NATO Secretary General To Quit

PARIS (UPI)—Dirk U. Stikker of the Netherlands, secretary general of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) for the past three years, yesterday announced he will resign this summer.

Stikker

The 67-year-old Stikker made his announcement at a special meeting of the NATO permanent council to commemorate the 15th anniversary today of the signing of the Western defense alliance.

It was understood the Dutch statesman is resigning because of health reasons. He underwent surgery for an internal ailment at Walter Reed Hospital in Washington, D.C., last October and returned to his desk here only after a prolong absence.

Stikker was appointed secretary general on April 21, 1961, succeeding Belgium's Paul-Henri Spaak who had served from 1957. Spaak's predecessor was Britain's Lord Ismay.

The question of a successor will be discussed through diplomatic channels.

Johnson Divorce Trial Ends

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—The longest divorce trial in San Francisco history has ended—in divorce.

The 26-year-old marriage of multi-millionaire Walter Johnson, 79, and his wife, Pauline, 57, was officially dissolved yesterday in Superior Court after eight years of controversy that included 85 days of trial.

The settlement included $1,857,962.51 in community property for Pauline and an estimated $1,650,000 in lawyers' fees, court costs and related expenses.

Johnson, who is chairman of the board of American Forest Products Co., commented: "After all, it's only money."

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Nevada gaming agents raided a major Las Vegas strip casino last night and shut down gambling because of alleged cheating.

Kennedy Purchase

NEW YORK (UPI)—A friend of the Robert F. Kennedy family yesterday revealed that the attorney general was the actual purchaser of a printed copy of the Emancipation Proclamation signed by Abraham Lincoln.

The document was sold at auction here Tuesday for $9,500. The purchaser at that time was identified as Gerald J. Shea. But Shea said yesterday he had made the purchase for Kennedy.

Shea said the attorney general would either keep the document for his own collection or donate it to the John F. Kennedy Memorial Library to be built in Cambridge, Mass.

Quip From Adlai

BERKELEY (AP)—The ovation was enthusiastic and prolonged when Adlai E. Stevenson was introduced at the University of California's Charter Day Observance Thursday.

Responding, Ambassador Stevenson turned to Gov. Edmund G. Brown and said: "Governor, if that had gone on a moment longer I'd have come out here and run for senator."

A new burst of applause greeted Stevenson's quip on the last-minute entry of Pierre Salinger, former White House press secretary, into California's Democratic senatorial race.

Deadline On Primary Is Passed

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The deadline for qualifying for California's June 2 primary election had passed today and only two delegations were officially on the presidential primary ballot. (See also story, page 23.)

But spokesmen for three other candidates claimed that their delegations would qualify after county clerks validate signatures and report to the secretary of state's office. They have four days in which to do this.

At yesterday's 5 p.m. deadline, the secretary of state office said only Sen. Barry Goldwater (R-Ariz.) and Gov. Edmund G. Brown, and their delegations had qualified.

On the GOP side, spokesmen for both New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller and former Minnesota Gov. Harold E. Stassen both claimed to have filed enough signatures to qualify. Republican contenders needed to file 13,702 valid registered voter signatures with county clerks by last night's deadline.

A last-minute filing flurry in Los Angeles resulted in an apparent challenge to Governor Brown's delegation on the Democratic side. Supporters of Los Angeles Mayor Samuel Yorty's delegation said they had amassed the 15,186 needed valid signatures for a Democratic qualifier.

San Rafael Boy Hurt In Accident

A 12-year-old San Rafael boy received minor injuries at 8:05 a.m. yesterday when his bicycle was struck by a car at the intersection of Del Ganado and Las Raposas Roads is Terra Linda.

Driver of the auto was Dr. Arthur A. Reiss, 33, of 740 Pine Lane, San Rafael, who told the patrol he was travelling slowly but failed to see the young cyclist, who admitted he was travelling on the wrong side of the street.

Quake Hits Nerves Of Alaska Residents

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (UPI) — A jolting aftershock from the Good Friday earthquake rocked Anchorage yesterday, but apparently the only damage was to the frazzled nerves of the city's residents.

The temblor was the latest and sharpest in a series of aftershocks that have rocked the biggest city in the 49th state since the disaster which left 122 persons dead or missing March 27.

Yesterday's tremor occurred at 2:40 p.m. as many Alaskans were listening to Gov. William Egan conclude a radio speech to a joint session of the Alaska legislature at Juneau for far-reaching action to help the state battle back.

Hundreds of other Alaskans meanwhile battled to save their property in the vicinity of Kodiak, where 80-mile-an-hour winds tore at the battered ruins left by the tidal wave spawned by the Good Friday earthquake. One fishing vessel was sunk and 15 others piled on rocky breakwaters by the wind.

When yesterday's aftershock hit Anchorage, people on the street stopped and stared at each other in disbelief and then headed for cover. Many others among the city's 100,000 residents poured into the streets.

Anchorage Policeman Harold Adams said the police station "started shaking and everybody stopped what they were doing."

"Then they headed for the door. By the time they reached the door, the shaking stopped. Altogether, it lasted five to 10 seconds." he said.

Mrs. Lyman Woodman said "It was a sickening sensation."

There were conflicting reports as to the intensity of the jolt. The University of California at Berkeley said the quake registered 5.25 on the Richter scale. The University of Washington in Seattle recorded 7.5 and seismologists at Fairbanks, Alaska, reported a 6.5 intensity.

Killer Tornado Hits Air Base In Texas

WICHITA FALL, Tex (UPI)—A killer tornado dipped down out of a clear sky yesterday and churned a 15-minute path of destruction through Sheppard Air Force Base and two residential areas.

By the time it lifted back into the sky it had killed seven persons, injured 74 and caused an estimated 1.5 million dollars damage.

Red Cross civil defense, and National Guard units joined Wichita Falls police and fire departments and their auxiliaries today in aiding the storm's victims.

The damaged areas were roped off to protect against looting and passes were required for stricken residents to get to their homesites.

The more than 200 families left homeless took refuge in emergency shelters and private homes. Most of the houses destroyed were in the Sunset Terrace addition.

Gov. John Connally ordered 100 national guardsmen to protect wrecked and damaged homes from looting and sent Col. Jesse Ward, state director of civil defense, to the area.

The funnel destroyed 20 buildings, most of them of World War II vintage and abandoned, at the air base. Three KC-97 jet tanker aircraft were heavily damaged and the base's electricity was cut off.

Emergency generating units supplied power to vital facilities, including the five-million-dollar hospital which was opened last November. The storm tore up the old hospital building but left the new one untouched

Tired Figures

NEW YORK (UPI)—To keep all of America's cars on the road a minimum of 246,735,460 tires are required, reports Tyrex, Inc., the association of rayon tire cord manufacturers. The United States, which represents only 6.7 per cent of the world's area, owns 63 per cent of the world's passenger cars.

Health Meeting Slated Friday

The sanitation division of the Marin County Health Department will present a program entitled "Keeping Marin a Healthful Place to Live" at a luncheon at Sabella's Restaurant Friday.

The occasion is the department's annual volunteer luncheon. It starts at 11:45 a.m.

There will also be a progress report on the bedside nursing program. The program recently came under discussion in a debate over finances between County Administrator Alan Bruce and Department Director Dr. Carolyn B. Albrecht.

Bolinas Planning New Sewage Plant

Bolinas residents plan a $150,000 sewage treatment plant to solve their disposal problems and comply with a "cease and desist" order issued by the Bay Region Water Pollution Control Board.

The state board has ordered the Bolinas Public Utilities District to stop emptying raw sewage into Bolinas Channel.

About 40 persons last night heard the utilities board report on progress of plans for the plant.

The board has accepted the initial report on the project by Kennedy Engineers of San Francisco. The study surveys needs, suggests five possible locations in the vicinity of Bolinas and estimates cost of land and construction at $150,000.

Chairman Sherman R. Smith said the board has applied for a federal grant which provides funds for areas directly subjected to pressure to relieve a situation like that in Bolinas. If granted, the funds would take care of 30 per cent of the total cost.

Smith said the board is studying methods of financing, including a bond issue and a system whereby persons directly connected to the system would bear the greater burden of the cost. He said a connection charge, plus a monthly service charge, probably would be made. A small service charge is now made for the 166 connections to the system.

The chairman said it was too late for a bond issue to be placed on the June primary ballot. It will have to go on the November ballot or a special election will be called.

pointed out that the general's heart, pulse and blood pressure were the vital signs that seemed to be ebbing.

Until today, hospital spokesmen had said there had been "no obvious change" in these vital functions.

Since MacArthur entered the hospital March 2, doctors have removed his gall bladder, his spleen and part of his intestine.

Heaton reported that treatment through this morning included intravenous injections and peritoneal dialysis — a chemical procedure similar in function to an artificial kidney.

He attributed MacArthur's valiant fight against death to the general's "inately strong constitution, his strong fiber, his will to live."

Heaton also credited "superb care" by the doctors and other personnel at Walter Reed.

"We have left nothing undone," he told newsmen.

College Of Marin Fall Semester Elections Set

Elections for fall semester student body officers at College of Marin were set this week by the executive council of the associated students.

Elections will be held May 18 and 19. The time and locations of the polling places have not been set. Petitions of candidacy are due in counselor John Gillin's office by 5 p.m. May 11.

The council heard that most of the 124 students responding to a questionaire are interested in an intra-mural sports program.

The council approved sending President David Lehman, Vice President Richard Skinner, Treasurer Lloyd Stasiowski, Parliamentarian Robert Scoville, and Secretary Karen Kester to a student government conference in Los Angeles April 23-25.

Mariner Cove Improvement Assn. elected four new members to its seven-man board last night at San Clemente School.

Leney and Albert J. Boro, retiring chairman, last night spoke on city management, the proposed safety buildings and school bonds.

The association will present an achievement award to the outstanding member of the graduating class at San Clemente in May.

Cyclist Injured After Collision With Car

Ronald Prentice Osborn, 15, of 20 Locksly Lane, San Rafael, was treated at Marin General Hospital for bruises of the right arm and lower right leg after his motorcycle was struck by a car at Third and Mary streets in San Rafael. at 1:15 p.m. yesterday.

Police cited the driver of the auto, Paul Benton Ware Jr. of 1075 Las Gallinas Avenue, San Rafael, for not yielding the right of way on leaving a private drive.

Sanitation Meeting

Alto Sanitation District will consider extension of a sewage line on the east side of Highway 101 at 8 p.m. Monday in the fire house. The extension is to provide for new apartment construction.

Man Struck; Driver Leaves Scene

San Rafael police today sought the driver of a 1956 Plymouth two-door sedan which ran down Paul Hawkinson, 87, of 523 C Street, San Rafael, at the corner of First and C streets at 8:19 p.m. yesterday.

Hawkinson was in satisfactory condition today at San Rafael General Hospital with injuries to his right leg as well as numerous scrapes and bruises.

A witness, Mrs. Pamela Irene Merk, 20, of 180 Bodkins, Hamilton Air Force Base, told police she saw the car turn the corner and speed east on First Street, but did not realize a man was hit until she saw Hawkinson lying in the street.

She said she first became aware of the car after she heard a screech of brakes. She then saw it hesitate before it sped away. The sedan was described by Mrs. Merk as being white over yellow.

tion of the mentally retarded minors. The hikes came for a summer school program with a full time teacher and for psychologist's services.

Asst. Superintendent Rudolph S. Kupfer told Bruce that in the past the state has paid for the psychological services, but that these services had, actually, been "bootlegged" into the program and not shown specifically on budgets submitted to the state.

He said the state code does not specifically cover such expenditures, and that new state budget requirements force the county schools office to account specifically for all employees' activities.

restaurant in Alto, police said.

Sausalito police received a telephone call yesterday from a racetrack patron that he saw the men at Golden Gate Fields in Albany Thursday.

But, Sgt. Cooper said, the last positive report came from Miami Beach, Fla., where Miami police said they found a rented car parked at Miami International Airport at 7:04 p.m. Wednesday. The car had been rented by the two men.

Miami police said the men, driving a gold Thunderbird and wearing expensive clothing, attempted to make a purchase in a men's clothing store when the proprietor made a telephone call to check on the validity of the Corbett credit card they were using. He was told the real Donald Corbett Jr. was dead.

The suspects hurried out of the store, reportedly taking two $3.50 straw hats as they departed. When police and FBI agents were called, they discovered that the pair had checked out of their Miami Beach motel and, at last report, were inquiring about an excursion to Nassau in the Bahamas.

In renting the car, the men used the names John King and "Charles Ferry."

There was no further trace of the suspects until yesterday's phone call that they were at the race track.

Judge Joseph G. Wilson signed murder warrants against the two in Marin County Municipal Court yesterday and asked that they be held without bail.

Deputy District Attorney Bruce Bales then sent a letter to U.S. Attorney Cecil Poole saying the murder charges had been filed and requested that they be pursued by federal authorities.

Sgt. Cooper said that King and Jones are the only suspects in the murder. "They have been positively identified by people living in this area," he said. "At this time we have no other information of anyone else involved."

King and Jones were named as suspects after articles stolen from Corbett's apartment were found in the ark where King had been living.

A stained ice pick found in King's apartment, which may have been used to stab Corbett, is undergoing tests. Cooper said the results may be known Monday.

Driver Cited In Auto Crash

Richard Lyman Cole, 35, of 555 Canal Street, San Rafael, was cited for following too closely after his car struck the rear end of another on Highway 101 near the Corte Madera interchange at 7:30 a.m. yesterday.

Millie Gargan, 38, of 260 Canal Street, San Rafael, a passenger in Cole's car, received a lump on the lower part of her right leg, according to the California Highway Patrol, but said she would go to her own doctor for treatment.

Cole's convertible struck the rear of a car driven by Ernest C. Nahnacassia, 26, of 30 Locust Avenue, Larkspur. The patrol said damage to both cars was moderate.

Wrong Side Car Causes Injuries

An Oakland man was cited for driving on the wrong side of a freeway yesterday after his car became involved in a collision near the Richmond bridge which sent the other driver to the hospital.

Injured was M/Sgt. Samuel Ray Isaacs, 36, of Bossier Air Force Base, La., who was taken to San Rafael General Hospital for treatment of a fractured and dislocated collar bone. He later was transferred to the Hamilton Air Force Base Hospital, where he was treated and released.

The California Highway Patrol said Isaacs' station wagon was demolished after it collided with a car driven by Clarence Thomas Garrity, 60, of Oakland.

Garrity told officers he became confused after turning from the San Quentin Road to the bridge.

a showdown between "Chinese" and "Russians" in their own ranks before they can take sides internationally.

This is bound to weaken them and lower their effectiveness as a political force.

A foretaste came from Belgium, where the Communist Party is already split. The pro-Chinese hailed the idea of a conference and claimed it was originally a Chinese idea, which, in fact, it was.

The pro-Russians, apparently not tipped off in advance, maintained an embarrassed silence and said it was too soon to comment.

One key spot to watch is Cuba where Prime Minister Fidel Castro's supporters are deeply divided on the Moscow-Peking question.

Hiram Johnson III Is Now Taking On Bodega Bay Cause

Hiram Johnson III of Belvedere has set his sights on a new enemy—Pacific Gas and Electric Co.

Johnson created the Anti Digit Dialing League, which has all but given up its battle with the Bell Telephone System.

He plans to join the fight to save Bodega Head from the atomic plant PG and E wants to build there.

Before he throws himself completely into the new battle, Johnson has one more jab for the telephone company. He is asking friends to support a delaying action suggested by attorney Melvin Belli. Beginning April 13, and every Monday, Belli plans to ask Information for the number every time he makes a call, instead of dialing it.

Injured In Fall

Mrs. Theresa Boughn, 44, of 111 Longfellow Drive, Mill Valley, was in good condition in Marin General Hospital today with an injured left shoulder. She was taken to the hospital by the Mill Valley Fire Department ambulance early today after she fell at her home.

Judge Is Named For Bias Hearing

Jordan L. Martinelli of San Rafael, retired Marin County Superior Court Judge, has been appointed to hear disqualification charges Monday in San Francisco against Judge Elton C. Lawless of San Francisco Municipal Court.

Pickets arrested in the anti-discrimination demonstration at the Sheraton-Palace Hotel, are seeking to disqualify Judge Lawless from hearing the case, claiming bias.

Judge Martinelli was appointed by Chief Justice Phil S. Gibson of the State Supreme Court.

School Budget To Be Discussed

Preliminary 1964-65 budget discussion will be held by the Mill Valley School District trustees Monday at 8 p.m. at 26 Miller Avenue. The board will discuss a landscape proposal for Strawberry Point School and hear a report from the policy development committee on controversial issues and education increments.

The board will go into closed session to discuss extending the service time of teacher Mrs. Sula Crowell one year. She will be 65 during the 1964-65 school teaching year.

Dean died today at a local hospital after a brief illness.

A native of England, he came to this country with his parents as a child, settling in Lawrence, Mass. He later was graduated from Villanova University in Philadelphia.

He came to San Rafael in 1920, teaching for five years at the old Mount Tamalpais Military Academy. From 1925 to 1930, he taught mathematics and Latin at San Rafael High School, and also was a coach of football and baseball.

From 1930 until his retirement in the mid-1950s, he taught at the Tamalpais School for Boys.

Surviving are his wife, Margaret, a daughter, Mrs. Mary Alice Langhehn, and two grandchildren, all of San Rafael.

Burial will be at Mount Olivet Cemetery, San Rafael. Rosary will be recited at 8 p.m. tomorrow at Keaton's Mortuary in San Rafael.

JOHN HOLMES

NEW YORK (UPI) — Services will be held tomorrow at the Community Church here for its minister emeritus, Dr. John Haynes Holmes, 84, a leading liberal minister who helped organize the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) and the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People.

Dr. Holmes, who died yesterday, was an active minister from 1907 to 1949. He once offered his resignation to the church after declaring himself a pacifist at the outbreak of World War I in 1914.

He said he could not conscientiously support U.S. participation in the conflict, but the congregation unanimously affirmed its confidence in him.

One Hurt, Others Sought In Crash

A San Rafael man was taken to San Rafael General Hospital this morning after a three-car rear end accident in the 1500-block of Fourth Street, San Rafael.

Fred Cook, 53, of 69 Fawn Drive, complained of a sore back and was to be x-rayed.

Occupants of one of the cars, a man and woman, reportedly disappeared after the collision and police were searching for them. The car's windshield was smashed.

BEN CAMERON

MERIDIAN, Miss. (UPI) — U.S. Fifth Circuit Court Judge Ben F. Cameron, who was involved in one of the nation's most serious integration crisis, died yesterday at the age of 73.

Cameron, appointed to the circuit post in 1955, issued several stays of an integration order to have Negro James Meredith enrolled at the all-white University of Mississippi in 1962. He finally was overruled by the full Fifth Circuit Panel.

Last year, he charged in a dissenting opinion that the court was stacked in favor of integration. He said the appeals court had tended to use the desegregation suits in the Southeastern states.

JOHN ROSE

John William Rose, 67, of San Geronimo, died today at a local hospital after a long illness.

A retired warehouseman, he was a native of Kentucky and had lived in California 43 years and in Marin County five years.

Surviving are his widow, Donna Vene; a son by a former marriage, Carl Whipple of Bellingham, Wash.; two sisters, Betty O'Brien and Pegi Scott of North Hollywood, and a brother, Arley Rose of Redlands, San Bernardino County.

Funeral arrangements are pending.

ISAAC DIRKSEN

Funeral services for Isaac Dirkson, 34, of Sonoma, drowned by a tidal wave surge in Bolinas Channel last Saturday, are pending at Golden Gate Cemetery, San Bruno.

Dirksen, a toolmaker for the Alcon Co. of Sonoma, was born in Indonesia. He served in the Air Force from 1957 to 1961.

His body was found yesterday by Howard Wright, a zoologist from St. Mary's College, Moraga, who was studying sea life along the beach. The body was about 300 yards east of where Dirksen had been fishing when the tidal surge washed him out.

Assistant Coroner William Bradley said death was apparently caused by drowning.

Dirksen, who had lived in California for six years, leaves his wife, Bobbie Louise Dirksen of Sonoma, and a brother, Dr. G. L. Dirksen of Pasadena.

Funeral arrangements are being handled by Chapel of the Hills, San Anselmo.

HOWARD AKERS

When Making Deep V Neckline Baste On Piece Of Hem Tape

By EUNICE FARMER

"I just finished an overblouse with a deep 'V' in back, and instead of laying nice and flat next to my back, it gaps out and looks very unattractive. Can I correct this?"—Mrs. A.G.

Dear Mrs. A.G.:

Since you didn't mention using interfacing at the neckline, I have a sneaking suspicion that you didn't, and consequently, you have probably stretched the neckline when applying the facing.

Since the "V" neckline is cut on the bias, it is very easy to stretch. My suggestion, which works beautifully, is to baste a piece of hem tape on the wrong side of the fabric, just over the seamline. Pull this tape lightly as you baste, easing the back neckline onto the tape. Before sewing it, try it on and be sure it lays nice and close to your back, if not, take the tape off and ease up a little extra fabric onto the tape. Next machine-stitch the tape to the neckline before applying the interfacing and facing.

This might be a good place to mention that all necklines should be interfaced with a woven-type interfacing. Cut the interfacing the same as your facing pattern. If you don't have a facing pattern, use the outer edge of your pattern as a guide and cut the interfacing about three inches wide. Always baste to the wrong side of your garment, not to the facing itself. Then pin facing to garment and machine stitch the three layers at once.

"As a third-generation rug braider, here is my hint for making braided rugs lie flat. You must allow fullness in the braid that is being joined to the rounded part of the rug. As a test, each time you sew a curved area, lift the rounded portion of the rug and let it fall, if the rug 'cups' you have not allowed enough fullness on the braid that was joined. If the rug 'ripples', too much fullness has been allowed. It just takes a little practice to get the feel of it!"

Mrs. C. L. Malaney, North Miami, Fla., is this week's winner of a tailor trix pressing board.

"Won't you please ask your readers to come forth wtih some helpful suggestions to that age-old problem of perspiration? Now with warmer weather coming on, I simply dread putting on anything good at all because I ruin it the first time I wear it. To my knowledge, I have tried everything on the market, but two heads are better than one, so any suggestions will be appreciated. Also, what do you do with garments that have been ruined?"—Mrs. L.B.

Dear Mrs. L.B.:

Our readers have always helped out before, I know they will come to the rescue this time. Please send your suggestions to Sew Simple today. Perhaps your remedy will win a tailor trix pressing board for you.

Knit Notes: When knitting involves sewing, then it's a must for Sew Simple. Many of you have asked how yarns and fabrics can be attractively combined? Here's one that is a little different and very appropriate for this time of the year. Use one of the new linen type yarns and knit a shell overblouse to match a solid colored linen or Italian silk suit. Knit a strip of yarn on the bias about two inches wide and apply to the front edges of your jacket.

"To make convertible cuffs for your husband's shirts, so that he can choose whether to wear cuff links or not is a simple thing to do. Take your standard shirts, remove the button, and make a machine buttonhole beginning where the button was sewed on. Sew the button back on again, and he'll think you're so smart! Just like the ready made shirts."—Mrs. H.

Your Sewing Glossary: French dart: This is the name that is used for a dart that begins very low on the side seam and slants up to the tip of the bust on a diagonal line.

If you haven't sent for your copy of "Gussets," send a self-addressed stamped envelope and 10 cents with your request to Sew Simple in care of the Independent-Journal. It will not only help you with gussets, but many similar type details.

METROPOLITAN SOPRANO Gianna d'Angelo tries on her white Panama straw hat by Sally Victor, one of 50 hats she uses to give herself a fresh appearance during constant travel to singing engagements. The American soprano made her debut in Italy in 1954 and at the Met in 1961. (UPI Telephoto)

Her Hats Are Key To Fashion Image For Opera Singer

By GAY PAULEY

NEW YORK, (UPI) — Hats go with high C's in the career of one of the operatic world's bright new stars.

Gianna d'Angelo, coloratura of the Met, La Scala and concert stage, uses hats to change face.

She explained that with her singing schedule—she figures she flies about 50,000 miles a year—she must of necessity travel light.

SO, SHE MAKES up her wardrobe with a few basic suits and dresses and creates a new image for various occasions by changing hats. Such as, a hat for plane arrival, a hat for an interview, a hat for a business meeting, a hat for after-performance suppers drawn from her collection of 50 chapeaux.

Granted, she said, this slight of hat trick would mean a lot of space-taking boxes on a plane, but she's whipped this problem, too. She ships her hats in specially constructed canvas boxes by air freight to the city of her next appearance.

The auburn-haired beauty from Bristol, Conn., said there were other reasons why she's developed this wardrobe technique.

"For one thing, I've always loved hats," she said. "I think the face gives the first impression. A woman is looked at, photographed and talked to 90 per cent of the time from the shoulders up. A man looks at a woman's face first, then maybe the legs."

Miss d'Angelo took us on a tour of closets in her New York apartment to show some of the 50, many of them made for her by Sally Victor, and most by Anny, a milliner in Milan, Italy, where the singer now has a home, also.

SHE SAID SHE never throws a hat away—"A good hat doesn't go out of style." She produced a cerise and green velvet turban she's had since 1956. Out came a cocktail cloche in soft brown velvet in its third year. And out came her newest addition — a Victor design of white Panama straw with wide brim and huge, black taffeta bow at the front.

The collection includes a brown mink cartwheel and a chinchilla-trimmed gray velvet also of outside proportions. "Two of my favorites," said the singer. "I never wear either without getting a compliment. Aren't we women vain, though!"

There are tailored felts with scoop brims for daytime, chiffons and organzas and all-over, plumed hats for dress-up, a jewel-trimmed black silk snood for cocktails.

"I BELIEVE IN hats sporty for morning, elegant for afternoon, striking for evening," said Miss d'Angelo, who was born Jane Angelovich, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Angelovich of Bristol. She changed to Gianna d'Angelo when she went to Italy to study.

Miss d'Angelo has been singing since she was two and one-half years old and appeared on a children's program. She toured also as a child, singing, dancing and playing the piano.

"I was the New England Shirley Temple," she laughed.

HER FIRST opportunities in opera were abroad after study in New York and Italy. She made her debut in 1954 as Gilda at Rome's Bath of Caracalla. Since, she has sung in almost every Western European city that has an opera company, appeared at the major music festivals, done recordings, television and criss-crossed the United States to do opera and concerts.

She made her debut with the Metropolitan Opera April 5, 1961.

Supplies For Medical Relief

A team of members of the Women's Auxiliary to the Marin Medical Society perks up at the mention of Marin residents driving to Santa Barbara . . . They are continually seeking transportation to the Channel City for a very special cargo—the drugs, medical supplies, used instruments and equipment, crutches, braces and bandage they have packed for transport out of the port city to aid disaster victims in Central and South America, refugees from Communism in the Far East or to needy persons in 19 European countries.

THE PROGRAM is the Medical Relief section of the Direct Relief Foundation, which gathers medical supplies and drugs from 11 western states at its Santa Barbara warehouse to await shipping, often by the U.S. Navy's Project Handclasp.

MRS. WARREN BOSTICK of San Rafael is Marin chairman. She explains that since the local medical auxiliary cannot bear the shipment cost it must rely on members and friends heading for Sounthern California to deliver the supplies to the Santa Barbara warehouse. Last fall among those giving rides to boxed drugs and X-ray unit were Mrs. Harry Rothrock and Mrs. Leon Smith. More recently Dr. and Mrs. Maurice Salomon found themselves host to 400 pounds of drugs in their car.

OTHER BRANCHES of the foundation collect cash donations, clothing and food, and sponsor a self-sufficiency program. American Medical Assn. Auxiliary members are taking part in the program originated in 1948 by William Zimbin to aid Iron Curtain refugees.

An Estonian, Mr. Zimbin fled to China after the Russian revolution, but returned to Europe where he became a leading financier. He was approached by Adolph Hitler for financial assistance. When he refused, he was forced to leave Europe, but felt a responsibility to victims of war. As the refugees poured out of Nazi Germany, Zimbin, with the help of friends, shipped supplies and set up distribution centers abroad.

Before he died in 1951, he established a foundation to carry on his work. Direct Relief Foundation provided clothing, food and money for living expenses to refugees from Communism. Often medical emergencies arose, and cost of surgery, hospitalization and treatment were supplied. From this evolved Medical Relief, supported by the medical professions.

The supplies are sorted and packed by pharmacists under the supervision of a medical committee. They are sent to physicians in hospitals for treatment of their patients.

"I saw it in the paper..."

...means she has faith in what she reads there. You've said it yourself many a time. You have confidence that it's true, if you read it in the paper. And that's a good place for an advertiser to be, surrounded by news and editorial features that people feel are authoritative. According to an actual survey, 8 out of 10 people felt that newspapers are "reliable" and "dependable;" more than 7 out of 10 felt them to be "believable." This receptive frame of mind extends to the advertising messages. In the same survey, newspaper advertising is rated high in positive, and low in negative feelings. So whatever you want to sell them, tell them about it in the newspaper.

Governor Brown's Pledge On Redwoods Not Realistic

GOVERNOR BROWN'S pious pledge that "not a single redwood (tree) will be destroyed to build a freeway" sounds great.

It appeals to those who, not familiar with the facts, think that because the governor says it, it will be observed.

It sounds great to those whose mental picture of redwood trees is limited to the rather rare giant trees whose age is counted in milleniums (ignoring the abundance of scrawny second-rate redwoods that make up much of the vast north coastal areas of redwood forest).

THE FACT OF THE MATTER is that most redwood trees in our north coastal stands are NOT in public ownership. Most miles of Redwood Highway, even in the redwood forest areas, are routed through private lands, mostly owned by lumbering concerns over which the state exercises NO powers of prohibition on cutting.

This means that the loggers could strip an area through which a freeway is destined to pass. When the state ultimately buys the land for freeway development, Governor Brown's declaration can be observed. There'll be no redwoods left which would have to be cut down to build the freeway. It would pass through kind of a devastated area.

A more realistic approach would be to acquire so-called scenic corridors along freeway routes, so that they pass through preserved remnants of forests, instead of barren, logged-off wastelands.

THERE HAVE BEEN instances of Redwood grove rejection by the Save-the-Redwood League and the State Division of Beaches and Parks. That is, although the trees appeared beautiful, they were believed unsound and not likely to endure. Although they were in jeopardy of being logged off (alongside the Redwood Highway where the after-appearance would be the most distasteful), both the League and the State were cold to suggestions that they be acquired for preservation as State Park land.

Would Governor Brown apply his "not a single redwood" edict to freeway construction through rejected groves?

It would be better, obviously, to preserve a scenic corridor even through rejected redwood trees along a freeway in such an area, than to surrender the trees to loggers.

A PATTERN FOR the ultimate development of the Redwood Highway has already been established and deserves to be followed: freeways by-pass the heart of the groves of millennial giants, leaving the old Redwood Highway as a scenic "Avenue of the Giants."

Even through areas of second-rate stands, the freeway should get there first (before the loggers devastate the area) and a scenic corridor of the smaller, less-impressive redwoods can be preserved to beautify the freeway route, too. This, obviously, would involve taking out some trees to make way for the road.

SAN FRANCISCO SENATOR McAteer's resolution on redwoods is more realistic than the governor's comments.

The senator's resolution asks the State Department of Parks and Recreation, in effect, to "get off the dime" with their planning for north coast redwood parks.

Only those redwood trees in public ownership can be preserved. The state park authorities need to complete their studies on which areas deserve to be saved for posterity.

It is neither feasible nor desirable to save "every single tree." Present day tree farm forest practices, under state and federal supervision, provide for the reproduction of areas not preserved in public ownership. This procedure is both necessary and desirable for those areas not suited for state park acquisition, development and use.

These areas ought to be designated, so freeway development can move ahead without ploughing through privately owned areas (where the governor's edict cannot be enforced) but which should nevertheless in the future be preserved as public parks.

Senator McAteer's resolution deserves support so that highway improvement can move ahead in an orderly fashion—with guidelines based on reason instead of emotion.

SUICIDE CAN BE PREVENTED

Each year some 200,000 Americans try to take their own lives; 30,000 or more actually succeed in committing suicide.

In citing these figures, statistician Dr. Louis I. Dublin told the American Public Health Association that much can be done by communities, groups and individuals to rescue the would-be suicide "by offering a helping hand." If people who are emotionally or mentally upset can get help and sympathy, Dr. Dublin added, "experience has shown that suicide, is to a degree, at least, a preventable condition."

There are very few human problems that cannot be solved by people motivated by a divine desire to be of service to others and willing to accept the difficulties involved.

If you regard it as both a privilege and responsibility to act as God's agent in helping those less fortunate, you will welcome opportunities to give of your time and talents rather than close your eyes to the needs of those in trouble.

"Bear one another's burdens, and so you will fulfill the law of Christ."

Help me to realize, O divine Master, that in serving those in need I am honoring You.

Bay Tunnel Plan Is Given Praise

Editor, Independent-Journal:

Having read in recent months of various disasters planned for the Bay Region: Statues on Alcatraz; freeways in Golden Gate Park; arches on Golden Gate Bridge; and various architectural tours-de-force to expedite travel from Tiburon to Coit Tower and thereby ruin what is left of the most attractive part of San Francisco Bay — it is with unreserved acclaim that I greet Mr. (Gilbert Thomas) Telfer's plan for a tunnel to San Francisco.

If there are as many Marin residents against the desecration of the bay's two largest islands by a monstrous bridge as there now are against some of the aforementioned mistakes in environmental aesthetics, the success of Mr. Telfer's tunnel is assured.

The cost of said tunnel will be borne by commuters who would—I feel—sooner pay a slightly higher toll to preserve the magnificent Golden Gate.

Sees Corte Madera Bond Vote As 'Must'

Editor, Independent-Journal:

On April 14 citizens of Corte Madera will vote on the $200,000 bond issue that in one stroke will make possible three important improvements in the caliber of community services to the town. They are as follows:

1. The Fire Department will be housed in larger, more efficient quarters, in surroundings capable of handling the larger pieces of modern - day fire - fighting equipment the town now has and will get in the future.

(A new substation to house two pieces of equipment in place of a contractor's one-engine metal shed, presently used, will also be constructed.)

2. The Police Department will have new and efficient quarters in lieu of the two miserable rooms it calls "home" in the present Town Hall. For those who have never visited the Police Chief in his 10-foot cubby hole, this will be enlightening.

The following activities and functions are carried on by the female clerk, police sergeant and police inspector in the only other room the department owns: public reception, teletype equipment, police radio equipment, police files, library, current cases, evidence storage and fingerprinting. (A submarine would have more space in comparison.)

3. Relocating the Police and Fire Departments will allow necessary alterations to their old quarters to better house the administrative branches of city government which at present is largely contained in an old shack facetiously referred to as "Town Hall Annex." This building is a disgrace and would have been the first to fall in any slum clearance program elsewhere—but we house and expect efficient service from the people who work here for Corte Madera. Here you will find in unsafe, unbusinesslike and unsanitary condition the offices of the City Manager, City Clerk, Zoning Administrator, two secretaries and Superintendent of Streets.

In keeping with the Town's General Plan we have a beautiful park started with assurance of its completion and the never-ending gratitude of the people of Corte Madera clearly indicated.

The new Safety Building also follows the guidelines laid down in the General Plan. It will cost the townspeople the equivalent of a bottle of liquor or a trip to the theater for a family of four per year.

Surely this isn't too much to sacrifice for pride in one's community and efficiency in the services provided to it by her servants.

Let's vote this town some efficient government facilities. The town has a fine personnel but, like any efficient business, it has to have decent and proper equipment to work with.

Don't let Corte Madera suffer from lack of civic pride and lack of interest in its future well-being that plagues so many neighboring communities. Vote "Yes" for its future on April 14.

Digit Dialing Foes Very Narrow-minded

Editor, Independent-Journal:

The members of the Anti-Digit Dialing League seem to be very narrow-minded. They are worrying and protesting against, of all things, telephone numbers. There are so many other much more important things in today's world that their gripings seem actually absurd. The exchange names, it's true, may have had sentimental value, but if Pacific Telephone and the Public Utilities Commission feel a change is necessary, it probably is. Besides, the public doesn't really "own" the telephone equipment — the telephone company does, and it has the right to do what it wants to with its own equipment.

Mansfield Gives Johnson Jolt Over Delay In Action On Civil Rights

WASHINGTON (AP)—It was like putting a firecracker under President Lyndon B. Johnson's chair.

Sen. Mike Mansfield of Montana, Johnson's successor as Democratic majority leader of the Senate, calmly told reporters:

The Senate, because of the Southern Democrats' filibustering opposition, may not be able to finish the civil rights fight until next fall.

THE FIGHT ON the civil rights bill began a couple of weeks ago, droned along, and then got seriously started this week.

No finish till fall would carry the struggle through the summer with just time out for the Democratic and Republican presidential conventions.

Mansfield, unlike Johnson, is a relaxed and easy-going man whose attitude on filibusters, including this one, seems to be: "Oh, let the boys talk."

But Johnson has a lot of programs hanging in Congress, from foreign aid to war on poverty.

SOME OF THEM could get jammed, hashed and massacred if a long civil rights fight delayed action on them till the last minute.

Yet, Johnson almost certainly will want the Democratic presidential nomination so he can try to get elected to the White House on his own.

But he will need some positive accomplishments to campaign on, like a lot of good legislation passed.

Without that, he will be just a man who made big promises but couldn't produce.

He won't be the only sufferer if Congress is still in session next fall. All 435 House seats are at stake.

SO THE MEMBERS of Congress will need time next fall to campaign for re-election.

One way to speed up action on civil rights, if that's possible, is to keep the Senate in round-the-clock session for weeks until the filibusterers wear themselves out.

But in the process the pro-civil rights senators, and even the indifferent ones, will wind up worn out, too, and that could be dangerous for some in the upper - age bracket.

Mansfield wants no part of such a survival contest. He wants everything, as usual, done in a kind of gentlemanly way.

JOHNSON HASN'T expressed himself on Mansfield's latest statement, but it can be guessed how he feels for a couple of reasons:

1. He was a hard driver himself. He didn't let the fight go on for endless months when he was steering two civil rights bills through the Senate in 1957 and 1960, the only two to get through in this century.

2. Now he has an even bigger stake in the outcome than when he was majority leader. The civil rights program is his administration's program. He endorsed it, said he wants it, and needs it to point to.

Right here is where the Southern strategy may be most effective in putting pressure on Johnson to make compromises on the civil rights bili, since he has more than civil rights to worry about.

This, of course, was the Southern strategy from the beginning, but Mansfield's statement should give their chances a boost.

LOBBYING IN CONGRESS

Tax Cut Took Most Attention And Cash

By Congressional Quarterly

WASHINGTON—The high stakes involved in the tax-reduction bill in Congress were indicated by lobby spending reports for last year.

While final figures aren't yet in, an initial survey by Congressional Quarterly lists 23 groups that spent more than $30,000 each during the first nine months of 1963 to influence congressional behavior. These groups reported total expenditures of $1,428,950 for their lobbying last year.

At least 14 of the organizations mention the tax bill as among their major interests, including one established solely to encourage enactment of the measure. Lobbies must file spending reports quarterly with the House clerk under the 1946 Federal Regulation of Lobbying Act.

THE FIGURES show that two groups listed nine-month expenditures of more than $100,000. The highest outlay was reported by the United Federation of Postal Clerks, which spent $155,660. Its major goals, neither of which was successful last year, were passage of a proposed increase in salaries for federal employees and elimination of the work - measurement system in the Post Office.

The group also sought more liberal health benefits and modification of the retirement program to provide earlier retirement for postal employees. Their efforts toward these goals continue this year.

Second in reported spending for the period was the national headquarters of the AFL-CIO with $101,837. Three major measures which the AFL - CIO supported last year — the tax-cut bill, civil rights legislation and medical care financed through Social Security — did not become law.

The AFL-CIO also supported — successfully — the test ban treaty, increased government support of mental institutions, and federal aid to higher education.

OTHER TOP spenders were the National Farmers Union, third with $93,698; American Legion, fourth with $90,565; American Farm Bureau Federation, fifth with $84,905; United States Savings and Loan League, sixth with $76,721, and International Assn. of Machinists (District Lodge 44), seventh with $71,607.

Eighth on the list was the Business Committee for Tax Reduction in 1963, which spent a total of $65,383 in the second and third quarters in an effort to achieve its single legislative goal.

Another was the Citizens Committee for a Nuclear Test Ban. This group, which included 13 Nobel Prize winners among its 167 members, was tenth in spending with $61,240.

THE FOREST Industries Committee on Timber Valuation and Taxation, another new organization, was 17th in reported spending with $44,960. It successfully opposed provisions in the House-passed version of the tax bill that would have increased the taxation of timber sales.

One lobbying group spent three times as much in the first nine months of 1963 as in all of 1962. This was the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, which was ninth in total expenditures during the Jan.-Sept., 1963, period with $63,530. The group spent only $19,503 in 1962.

The increase followed a March, 1963, court decision allowing railroads to dismiss some 38,000 employees who had been displaced by diesel locomotives. When railroad unions threatened to strike, Congress passed a bill imposing arbitration in the dispute.

REMEMBER WHEN?

10 YEARS AGO

At a dinner meeting marking the 20th anniversary of the Marin Conservation League, Mrs. Norman B. Livermore, president, reviewed accomplishments of the group, including restricting billboards along highways and establishing of four state parks and one county park.

The Marin County Historical Society decided its first post-war project would be rebuilding of the historic Mission San Rafael Arcangel, built in 1817.

REDISTRICTING FUSS

For Whom Does Congressman Speak?

By LARRY OSIUS

WASHINGTON (AP)—Why all the fuss over Congressional redistricting?

Put one way, it's this: Every time Rep. Bruce Alger of Dallas, Tex., casts a vote in the House he speaks for 951,527 people. On the same issue, Rep. Fay Roberts from McKinney, Tex., in a nearby district, speaks for 216,371 people—less than one fourth as many as Alger.

Alger is a Republican and Roberts is a Democrat. It works the other way, too. Thus, Upper Michigan's Republican Rep. John B. Bennett votes for 177,431 people. Rep. John Lesinski, a Detroit Democrat, represents 802,994, more than four times as many as Bennett.

Redistricting is not just a matter of party farfare. In many cases it's a matter of rural vs. suburban dwellers—and so far the country folks have the upper hand.

At present, 85 of the 433 House members—there are two vacancies—come from districts with substantially less than the average population for districts in their states. Well over half of these over-represented districts are rural. Based on the 1960 census, in 21 of the 42 states which have Congressional districts the voters in the smallest district have at least twice the voting power of those in the largest.

In 1962, the Supreme Court ruled that the states must divide their seats in the legislature more equitably. Last month, in another landmark decision, the court held that Congressional districting is also in its jurisdiction.

The court set no standard for what it believes to be an equitable solution, but said:

"While it may not be possible to draw Congressional districts with mathematical precision, that is no excuse for ignoring our Constitution's plain objective of making equal representation for equal numbers of people the fundamental goal for the House of Representatives."

Congress could take over the problem. Hearings will begin soon on a proposal by Rep. Emanuel Celler (D-N.Y.) chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, requiring a deviation of no more than 15 per cent above or below the average population. The average would be 400,000 per district, with not less than 340,000 or more than 460,000 people.

In 1962, there were 413 Congressmen elected. Of these, 167—more than 40 per cent—came from districts either above or below the 15 per cent standard. Of the 85 House members representing underpopulated districts, 21 are Republicans and 64 Democrats. Of 82 from over-populated districts, 40 are Republicans and 42 Democrats.

Nineteen Congressmen represent districts with over 600,000 population. Besides Alger and Lesinski, they are: Reps. John Rhodes (R-Ariz.) Emilio Q. Daddario (D-Conn.) Abner W. Sibal (R-Conn.) Paul G. Rogers (D-Fla.) Charles L. Weltner (D-Ga.) Donald C. Bruce (R-Ind.) Richard E. Lankford (D-Md.) Clarence D. Long (D-Md.) Charles McC. Mathias Jr. (R-Md.) Charles E. Chamberlain (R-Mich.) James G. O'Hara (D-Mich.) William S. Bloomfield (R-Mich.) Paul F. Schenk (R-Ohio) Samuel L. Devine (R-Ohio) Clifford Davis (D-Tenn.) Henry B. Gonzalez (D-Tex.) and Bob Casey (D-Tex.).

Outside the South, it's not the major cities which suffer but the suburbs and medium-sized cities. New York, Boston, Chicago, Philadelphia and Los Angeles all have, to a large extent, an equitable distribution of House seats.

Some states have managed to stay within the proposed 15 per cent deviation. New York, for instance, has the largest delegation with 41 members, yet only one district, Rep. Edna Kelly's, is slightly above the standard.

Other states having more than one district and staying within the standard or with only a minor deviation are Iowa, Kansas, Maine, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, New Hampshire, North Dakota and Rhode Island.

Varied Contest Around Nation Follow Primary In New Hampshire

By Congressional Quarterly

WASHINGTON—The use of write-in votes, which enabled Henry Cabot Lodge to sweep the Republican primary in New Hampshire even though his name was not on the ballot, will be permitted in six more states.

Those allowing write-ins in presidential preference polls are: Illinois (April 14), Massachusetts and Pennsylvania (April 28), Texas (May 2), Nebraska (May 12) and Oregon (May 15).

Lodge's name will actually appear on the ballot only in Oregon. Sen. Barry Goldwater (R-Ariz.) has permitted his name to go on the ballot in Illinois, Texas, Indiana, Nebraska, Oregon, Florida and California. The name of New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller (R) will appear on the presidential primary ballots in Texas, West Virginia, Oregon and California.

Except by write-in vote, few citizens will be able to mark their ballots for Pennsylvania Gov. William W. Scranton (R). The only state in which Scranton's name will appear on the ballot is Oregon. Michigan Gov. George W. Romney (R) has insisted that his name appear on no primary ballots whatever.

A rundown of the remaining primary states:

WISCONSIN—April 7, filing deadline March 6. A Republican "favorite son" unity slate formed behind Rep. John W. Byrnes (R-Wis.) and is unopposed. Democrats must choose between "favorite son" Gov. John W. Reynolds (D) and a right-wing, segregationist slate pledged to Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace (D).

ILLINOIS — April 14, filing deadline Jan. 27. Goldwater and Sen. Margaret Chase Smith (Maine) are the only formal entries in the GOP preference poll, but write-in efforts could materialize for Lodge or other candidates. No names were entered in the Democratic preference poll.

NEW JERSEY — April 21, filing deadline March 12. Unpledged organization delegate slates are favored to win over scattered opposition.

MASSACHUSETTS — April 28, Feb. 25 filing deadline. An unpledged Republican delegate slate composed of moderate leaders like Sen. Leverett Saltonstall and former U. S. Secretary of State Christian A. Herter is favored over a slate of Goldwater conservatives.

PENNSYLVANIA—April 28, filing deadline Feb. 18. Gov. William W. Scranton (R) successfully persuaded Goldwater, Rockefeller and other Republican candidates not to enter the preference poll. There were also no Democratic entries.

TEXAS—May 2, withdrawal deadline March 12. Hoping to drum up support for Goldwater and draw conservatives into the GOP primary, Texas Republicans ordered the first presidential primary in the state's history. They placed the names of the announced candidates—Goldwater, Rockefeller, Smith, Stassen—on the ballot with no withdrawal privileges.

ALABAMA — May 5, filing deadline March 1. All delegate candidates agreed in advance to support Wallace at the national convention.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA—May 5, filing deadline April 4. District Republican leaders want to change the preference primary rules so that they can enter all candidates' names, with or without their consent.

INDIANA — May 5, filing deadline March 26. Goldwater is entering this primary but Rockefeller and other candidates are expected to stay out.

OHIO — May 5, filing deadline Feb. 5. GOP organization slate pledged to "favorite son" Gov. James A. Rhodes (R).

NEBRASKA—May 12, filing deadline March 13. Goldwater is running unopposed in the preference poll.

WEST VIRGINIA—May 12, filing deadline Feb. 1. Rockefeller was the only candidate to enter the preference poll.

OREGON — May 15, filing deadline March 6. Six names will appear on the Republican presidential preference ballot: Lodge, Goldwater, Rockefeller, Scranton, Nixon and Senator Smith. President Johnson's name was the only one placed on the Democratic preference ballot. Observers will watch to see if a write-in campaign develops for Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy.

MARYLAND—May 19, filing deadline March 16. On the Republican side, both Goldwater and Rockefeller forces are organized, but neither has made a final decision on whether to enter. Democrats expected no contest until Gov. Wallace entered his name. Primary date may be advanced to June 16.

FLORIDA — May 26, filing deadline March 3. Two GOP slates are entered, one headed by Rep. William C. Cramer (R) and officially pledged to Goldwater and another headed by state party chairman Tom Fairfield Brown, which is technically unpledged but actually for Goldwater. Democrats will have a choice between a slate pledged to President Johnson and a slate pledged to Sen. Strom Thurmond (D-S. C.).

CALIFORNIA—June 2, filing deadline April 3. Slates pledged to Goldwater and Rockefeller will clash head-on in a possible "sudden death" primary. Former Sen. William F. Knowland (R) heads the Goldwater slate, Sen. Thomas H. Kuchel (R) the Rockefeller slate. Democrats will have a choice between two uninstructed delegations, both actually in favor of President Johnson. One is led by Gov. Edmund G. Brown (D) and the other by Los Angeles Mayor Samuel W. Yorty (D). The White House has announced it will deal only with Brown.

NEW YORK—June 2. Goldwater forces hope to pick off a few delegate slots as they oppose the regular organization slate which will be solidly behind Rockefeller.

SOUTH DAKOTA—June 2, filing deadline April 18. No candidates have yet entered.

First National Vote For Washington In 164 Years

Nation's Capital Residents Still Can't Govern Selves

By Congressional Quarterly

WASHINGTON D.C. — Residents of this city in November will vote for president and vice president for the first time in over a century and a half.

Not since 1800 have the people living in the District of Columbia cast ballots in a presidential election.

The 23rd Amendment, approved in 1961, gave Washingtonians the right to help elect their national leaders for the first time in 164 years. But they still are denied the opportunity to elect local officials and to govern their own affairs, which are under the control of Congress. Washington is the only significant enclave in the Western world without self-government.

The outcome of the May 5 D. C. primary and the November presidential balloting is expected to influence directly any possibility that might exist for getting a meaningful home rule bill through Congress. In preparing for these elections, however, the major parties face a number of obstacles unique to the Capital City.

In the first place, Washington, unlike any state, is completely urban. Its 764,000 residents (who will account for three electoral votes) make it more populous than 11 of the states.

The District of Columbia also is the only major city in the country with a majority of Negro citizens. This makes it a testing place for political campaign techniques that might be useful in other areas with large concentrations of Negro voters.

Still another unusual factor is the high percentage of government employees and military personnel who maintain their legal residence in various states. It is estimated that as many as 200,000 persons might vote elsewhere by absentee ballot.

Furthermore, many government employees, both federal and city, are uncertain about what they may and may not do within the provisions of the Hatch Act, which allows them to vote and express opinions but limits most other political activities.

In the face of these complicating factors, both major parties are hard at work trying to convice as many people as possible to register. Republicans are assisted in these efforts by the probability of a presidential preference question on the primary ballot. The names of New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller, Sens. Barry Goldwater of Arizona and Margaret Chase Smith of Maine, and Harold E. Stassen are likely to appear on the ballot. D.C. Republican Chairman Carl L. Shipley is attempting to have the names of the other prominent candidates included as well.

The Democratic registration drive lacks the impetus of a presidential preference poll, since all factions support President Lyndon B. Johnson for the 1964 nomination. However, a primary battle looms for control of the local party machinery.

Leaders of both parties realize the relationship of a large turnout on election day to the outlook for eventual home rule. A sizeable vote would not overcome resistence by Southern congressmen to giving Washingtonians the right to run their own affairs, but a relatively light turnout will invite the charge that people who will not take the trouble to vote for president are not qualified to govern themselves.

Much of the opposition in Congress to extending home rule to Washington is based upon the city's predominantly Negro population. Any elected District government would very likely be dominated by Negro officials, a fact which has prompted the Southern-led House District Committee to bottle up four home rule bills since 1952.

However, opposition to self-government for the Nation's Capital is not confined to Congress. Many white district residents would prefer leaving their city's affairs in the hands of Congress rather than having a Negro-dominated government.

Strengthening this feeling among Republicans are recent registration figures, which are running nearly three and one-half to one Democratic. Republican Chairman Shipley agrees that this ratio is due to overwhelming Democratic support in predominantly Negro neighborhoods. He warns that if Washington goes overwhelmingly Democratic in the Nov. 3 election, the result would be a major setback for home rule. Many Republican congressmen, he says, might have misgivings about granting self-government to a "one-party" Democratic city.

If this is true, the district's best hope for home rule seems to be a heavy vote about evenly divided between the major parties — which, at this time, does not seem likely.

U.S. Gives Blessings To Brazil Coup

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

The leftist government of President Joao Goulart of Brazil was toppled this week by anti-Communist factions and a new provisional president was installed.

The U.S. gave its blessings to the military-inspired deposition and looked with favor upon the new acting President Ranieri Mazzilli and his appointment of an anti-Communist cabinet.

U.S. satisfaction and welcome over the change in government which appeared, under Goulart, to be steering more and more to the left, was understandable.

President Lyndon B. Johnson sent his "warmest wishes" to Mazzilli. Johnson said the U.S. had been watching Brazil's political and economic difficulties "with anxiety."

Another bolstering statement of support was voiced by Secretary of State Dean Rusk. Rusk said there was mounting evidence under Goulart's government of a movement "toward some sort of authoritarian regime." Rusk praised the armed forces of Brazil which united to bring about Goulart's downfall. He said they were basically committed to constitutional government.

The general view, shared by officials in Washington and Rio de Janiero, was that Goulart, faced with an almost insurmountable economic crisis, was preparing extreme and desperate measures to remain in office.

Brazil, South America's largest country, was reported calm as the new chief of state started the wheels of government rolling again. The anti-Goulart coup was accomplished without a shot being fired.

Goulart had been president since 1961, succeeding Dr. Janio Quadros who had resigned unexpectedly while Goulart, then vice president, was paying a visit to Communist China.

Around The World Around The Clock

Washington—The United States and Panama agreed to re-establish diplomatic relations and designated special ambassadors to work toward settlement of the Canal Zone dispute "without limitations or preconditions of any kind."

Paris—The North Atlantic Treaty Organization celebrated its 15th anniversary and in Washington President Johnson hailed it as a "tested and recognized foundation stone of America's foreign policy."

San Antonio, Tex.—America's first earth-circling astronaut Lt. Col. John H. Glenn Jr., disabled with an ear injury, announced his withdrawal as a Democratic candidate for a U.S. Senate seat in Ohio.

Budapest—Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev, visiting the Hungarian capital for the 19th anniversary celebration of the liberation of Hungary from German rule, said Communist China presented a danger to the world Communist movement. He called for Communist unity to combat the Peking ideology.

Hong Kong—The Chinese Communist Party unleashed a bitter attack on Soviet Premier Khrushchev and urged world Communist leaders to repudiate his leadership in the world movement.

St. Augustine, Fla.—Mrs. Malcolm Peabody, the 72-year-old mother of Massachusetts Gov. Endicott Peabody, was arrested when she participated in a civil rights sit-in demonstration in a segregated dining room of a motor lodge.

Nicosia, Cyprus—The United Nations peacekeeping force, joined by Greek Cypriote policemen, started patrolling the country to quell any renewed Greek-Turkish factional warfare.

Anchorage, Alaska—Alaska's senators reported to President Johnson that it would take 500 million dollars to get their state back on its feet as a result of the Good Friday earthquake.

Liquor Industry Disagrees On 'Demand'

SACRAMENTO (CNS) — Two segments of the California retail liquor industry have showed up in sharp disagreement on a proposal to define the "public demand" necessary for issuance of a new liquor license within 200 feet of a business operating with a similar license.

The occasion was an administrative hearing held by Malcolm E. Harris, state director of alcoholic beverage control, concerning half a dozen proposed changes in department rules.

The law provides at present that no alcoholic beverage license may be issued for a premises within 200 feet of a premises with the same type of license unless there is a showing of public demand that cannot be satisfied by operation of the exisiting license. There is an exception for "restaurant row" type developments.

Harris has admitted there is no standard by which he can operate in granting or denying applications and each must be judged on its own merits. Harris has indicated a standard in the rules might be desirable.

The proposal considered at the Sacramento hearing was advanced by the California Retail Liquor Dealers Assn, an organization of off-sale, or package liquor stores. It provides that public demand is "the desire of the public reasonably proposed to be served by the applicant to purchase a reasonable variety in type, brand and price of alcoholic beverages, at reasonable hours and within a reasonable travel distance."

Lowell Sucherman, attorney representing the association, based his arguments in favor of the rule on a San Diego County Superior Court decision which held that such public demand had to be present at the time of the application, and not a demand expected in the future.

Sucherman said the decision held also that the matter of one-stop shopping convenience, as in supermarkets, or the offering of private labels, in themselves, did not constitute public demand.

Sucherman and his supporters, of course, were speaking in opposition to the grocery or drug store chains which feel they should have liquor licenses in order to serve their customers in the new shopping centers spring up all over California.

R. M. Schillito, of the California Retailers Assn., asked that no rule be adopted by the department until three cases now before the courts are settled. He said the San Diego case referred to by Sucherman would be appealed to a higher court and might not stand.

"I don't believe the proposed rule offers any guidelines for issuance of licenses," Schillito said. "It simply says that public demand is public demand."

Today is Saturday, April 4, the 95th day of 1964 with 271 to follow.

The moon is at its last quarter. The evening stars are Mercury and Venus.

On this day in history:

In 1841, William Henry Harrison, the ninth president of the United States, died in the White House exactly one month after his inauguration.

Also in 1841, John Tyler became the first vice president to succeed to the presidency through the death of the chief exe tive.

In 1917, the Senate approved a resolution of war against imperialist Germany.

In 1962, Gen. Edwin Walker resigned from the Army after he told his U. S. command in Germany that the "armed forces are paralyzed by our national policy of "no win and retreat from victory."

A thought for the day: British financier Cecil Rhodes once said: "Educational relations make the strongest tie."

MARIN BRIDGE

Columnist Pays Tribute To Memory Of Great Man In The Bridge World

CASTRO

We are in the middle of our Marin County Sectional Championship. Today is the Open Pairs Championship event and the Marin Unit donates a trophy to the winners called the George Barton Trophy.

The Lura Crossley Junior Trophy will also be won this weekend. This trophy, strictly for Marin Unit members, goes to the junior player winning the most points during the sectional.

Last Wednesday I went over to the George Barton studios in San Francisco, they have been in business for 25 years, and talked to Mrs. Mary Barton and her daughter, Diane. Mary made life master this year in the Portland Nationals. Diane was the youngest life master in the United States when she went over the mark at the age of 16.

This hand was played by Mary Barton last Wednesday. I am happy to say she knows how to find the diamonds!

3♦	P	4Nt	P
5♦	P	5Nt	P
6♦!	All Pass.

I asked Mary her ideas on opening two bids and she said she opened two bids with nine tricks in her hand. She also said this hand was a shade light and that was why she lied on her six diamond bid.

THE OPENING lead was the spade 6. Can you make seven diamonds? Mary did by trump finessing the ace of hearts, discarding her second spade on the queen of hearts and trumping two clubs with the three and queen of diamonds in dummy.

When I first started to play duplicate I went to George Barton studios in San Francisco because he always made me feel welcome. He infected everyone with his pleasantness. When Marin started their first sectional they asked George Barton to direct. He helped all our first clubs. He held junior tournaments in the Bay Area when no one else ran them. He taught many of our best players today and helped make life masters out of them.

GEORGE NEVER quite made life master and so when he passed away in 1959, the Marin Unit started this perpetual trophy in his memory. There is also a George Barton Trophy in the Los Angeles Nationals.

It's ironic but no Marin player has won the George Barton Trophy as yet. There are many of us trying our very best today. I wish I had taken lessons from George, I would probably have my name on that trophy by now.

I received only one answer from my question about the hand with Mrs. Boyle and Mrs. Hopkins a couple weeks ago and that answer came from Colonel (No Trump) Jackson of Tiburon, and he said he would have bid six no trump. He's right, it makes also.

Smaller Banks Might Get Bridge Funds

The Golden Gate Bridge and Highway District board finance committee voted 4-3 yesterday to recommend that small banks of Marin, Mendocino and Sonoma counties be invited to receive deposits of future district surplus funds.

Director Dan E. London of San Francisco voted no, saying he thought the present arrangement of having the funds all with the Bank of America was all right.

Bridge General Manager James Adam said the district has about six million dollars with Bank of American and acquires $200,000 to $250,000 more a month.

Several directors spoke in favor of wider distribution of the future reserves. They voted that small banks be notified of the district's requirement that funds deposited be guaranteed by 110 per cent government security in another bank.

It was pointed out that only in Marin, Mendocino and Sonoma counties are small independent banks. The three other counties in the district have only branches of the chain banks. The recommendation will go to the full bridge board.

Span Unit Votes Against Loans To Crescent City

The Golden Gate Bridge District finance committee voted yesterday to notify Crescent City and Del Norte County officials they regretted the district cannot loan or grant about $950,000 for tidal wave rehabilitation.

The committee voted that a letter to that effect be sent by District President Ben K. Lerer to the Crescent City mayor and the Del Norte County supervisors.

The committee acted on advice of Legal Counsel Jerome B. White who said under the bridge district act, there is no way legally that such a loan or grant could be made. "It's absolutely out of the question," said White. "The act has one purpose: bridge the Golden Gate."

Mill Valley Group Backing Library

The Mill Valley Chamber of Commerce board of directors has gone on record favoring the $325,000 bond issue for a new library to be built in Old Mill Park, Granville L. Beedle, secretary-manager, said today.

The issue will be voted on June 2.

Beedle also said the chamber office at 85 Throckmorton Avenue is giving out pamphlets of the League of Women Voters entitled "Voting Facts for Marin County."

Personnel Changes For Highway Patrol

Lt. Dante Lanza this week replaced Lt. Louis Vance in the Corte Madera office of the California Highway Patrol. Vance was transferred to the Santa Rosa office.

Before coming to Marin County, Lanza was stationed in the Oceanside office of the Highway Patrol. He and his wife and two children have moved to Corte Madera.

Sweeping Overhaul Of Cal Hunting Seasons Proposed

SACRAMENTO (AP) — The State Fish and Game Commission is studying proposals for a sweeping overhaul of California's hunting seasons.

Three different deer season proposals and a greatly expanded pheasant season, but with the present limit, were placed before the commission yesterday.

The commission also indicated that sage, Sierra and ruffed grouse hunters will get a Saturday-Sunday season instead of a Tuesday-Wednesday hunt proposed by the Department of Fish and Game.

These are the deer proposals:

An early coastal season of Aug. 1-Sept. 20 and late inland season of Sept. 19-Nov. 3, limit two bucks forked horn or better on the coast and one buck inland; by the Fish and Game Department.

A coastal season of Aug. 8-Sept. 27 and inland hunt Sept. 26-Nov. 8, with same limits as the departments; by Commissioner Thomas H. Richards.

One statewide season Sept. 5-Oct. 18, with a limit of two bucks on the coast and one inland, by Commission President Henry Clinescmidt of Redding.

The commission has nothing to say about the season in Modoc, most of Lassen and eastern Shasta and Siskiyou counties, which has a Sept. 21-Oct. 13 season frozen into state law by the legislature.

Richards proposed a six-week pheasant season, Nov. 21- Jan. 3, replacing the present two week season in northern California's wild pheasant territory. One hen would be permitted in the season bag of 10 birds.

Only males may be taken under present rules, but a three-year trial of the hen-in-the-bag season in the 1950s showed no damage to pheasant populations.

Richards also sponsored a proposal for an Aug. 29-30 sage hen season instead of the Sept. 1-2 season sought by the department.

Commissioner William Elser of San Diego suggested a Sept. 5 dove season opening to have the season start Saturday, but said a Sept. 1 opening should stand in Northern California. Birds usually fly south at the first frost.

The commission took under submission the proposals of the Department of Fish and Game for all other seasons. It will announce its determinations April 24 and set rules May 29.

Warrior Defense Crushes St. Louis

Independent-Journal Sports

120-85 Rout Ties Up NBA Playoffs

Coach Alex Hannum showed his San Francisco Warriors a horror movie and watched in return "the finest defense I've ever seen in the National Basketball Association."

As a result, the Warriors and Hawks go back to St. Louis for the third game tomorrow of their Western playoff finals, deadlocked at one game apiece.

While the westerners are battling, the Eastern struggle goes on at Cincinnati where the hometown Royals are 2-0 down to the defending champion Boston Celtics in their best four-of-seven series.

Hannum showed his players the movies of them blowing two 20-point leads to lose the playoff opener to St. Louis, 116-111.

"They sat in sullen silence and watched," the coach related of the Thursday night showing. "Then we discussed the situation and decided there had to be more running, more movement."

The result was a decisive 120-85 victory over the Hawks at the Cow Palace last night which squared the series.

Three heroes emerged although Hannum refused to single out anybody for special praise.

Yet is was 7-foot-1 Wilt Chamberlain scoring 28 points and the 6-foot playmaker Guy Rodgers repeatedly stealing the ball from the Hawks and scoring 21 that proved the big difference.

Wayne Hightower failed to score a point yet proved his value in holding all-league Bob Pettit to 14.

"The pressure was building up and then we had a bust-out night, a tremendous team effort starting with defense," Hannum declared. "Never have I seen a team in the NBA play better defense as a team and as individuals than we did."

He added: "Rodgers was fantastic coming up with loose balls and stealing the ball and triggering the fast break. But the fast break wouldn't have been possible without defense. I counted at least 20 clean blocks of St. Louis shots."

Chamberlain, the 6-9 Hightower and 6-11 Nate Thurmond did most of the blocking.

The Warriors led 28-23 at the end of the first quarter and near the end of the second they out-scored the visitors 13-2 to leave at halftime with a 62-44 advantage. They built it to 90-62 by the end the third quarter.

The Hawks hit only 36.3 per cent of their field goal attempts, a lowly mark which could be blamed both on a cold hand and the great San Francisco defense. Richie Guerin led the Hawks with 23 points. But Cliff Hagan, who had that many in the opener, scored only six in the second game.

A crowd of 9,063 at the Cow Palace watched the form reversal. As guard Gary Phillips explained it, "They tried to run on us. We ran back on them and scored. Everyone knew we should have won on Wednesday and this time we didn't let down. And we didn't let them sag their defenses on Wilt."

Chamberlain observed only, "We have to beat them at least once in St. Louis."

Rookies In Giant Limelight

CASA GRANDE, Ariz. (AP) — Third baseman Jim Ray Hart and outfielder Jesus Alou have been the rookies drawing the most attention in the camp of the San Francisco Giants — yet a third could make his mark this season.

Right-handed pitcher Ron Herbel finally appears ready to help the National League club. At 26, the 6-foot-1 inch 175-pounder from Denver has developed maturity.

He pitched two shutout innings in finishing up yesterday as the Giants beat Cleveland 5-3 in Nogales, Mexico.

Herbel fanned four in the two innings, including Leon Wagner for the final out of the game with Dick Howser perched on base. Wagner, former Giant outfielder, had belted a pair of solo homers at the expense of Bob Bolin.

Only hit off the rookie righthander was Howser's infield single.

Herbel has been a question mark for the Giants. In 1960 at Harlingen of the Texas League he posted a 15-4 mark with a 3.50 earned-run-average.

TACOMA RECORD

Stepping up to AAA Tacoma of the Pacific Coast League the next season, he was 16-5 and 3.57. The next year, however, it was 8-14 even though the ERA dropped to 3.47. Then last year he was 13-18 with a 3.17 mark.

At the suggestion of trainer Frank Bowman, the hurler was fitted with glasses this spring and the spectacles seemed to improve his pitching.

Orlando Cepeda continued to whale the ball and drove in four of the runs against the Indians who couldn't beat the Giants in Arizona or Mexico and get their next try in California.

The big first sacker whaled his fourth and fifth round trippers of the spring with Pedro Ramos the victim. In the fourth inning, Willie McCovey and Orlando hit back to back solo shots.

In the sixth, Mays singled to left, McCovey drew a walk and Cepeda poled the ball out of the Mexican park.

The journey across the border brought one unexpected problem. J. Alou couldn't go along.

His visa allowed him to enter the United States from his native Dominican Republic but not to re-enter from a foreign country. So he stayed in Arizona once while the rest of the team, including his brother Matty and countryman Juan Marichal, went into Mexico.

Matty and Juan had visas which allowed more than one entry.

CUBS SEND BOCCABELLA TO MINOR LEAGUE CLUB

The Chicago Cubs yesterday sent rookie first baseman John Boccabella of San Rafael to their Salt Lake City team in the Pacific Coast League on a 24-hour recall basis.

The Cubs, who signed Boccabella to a bonus contract following his graduation from University of Santa Clara last summer, apparently feel the former Marin Catholic High School star will benefit more playing daily in the Triple A league than he would by staying with the major league team as a reserve behind the veteran regular first sacker Ernie Banks.

Boccabella was a minor hitting sensation in early spring exhibition games with three home runs to his credit. The 24-hour basis by which he was sent to Salt Lake City means he can be recalled by the Cubs at any time during the season.

Figuring The 1964 Pennant Race; Giants Rated Solid Contenders

CONNOLLY

It is not wishful thinking, on my part, when I say the S.F. Giants have a real chance in the National League in 1964.

The Giants appear to be a sound, well-balanced club. And this year will be able to play with a roster of 25 players, not with 23 as they did last year. That alone is a big factor.

Take the L.A. Dodgers, for instance. Because of the inane first year rule they must try to win the pennant in 1964 with 21 players on account they have four first-year men on their roster. They can farm out one—the "designated" player, but he also will count in their 25-player roster.

Outside of Sandy Koufax, Don Drysdale, Ron Perronoski and Johnny Podres, which gives them an enormous pitching edge over all other clubs, the Dodgers are not overwhelmingly great, particularly if they try it with short reserve strength. An injury to a regular would hurt them badly, even spoil their flag chances.

ST. LOUIS rates there or thereabouts along with the Dodgers but I feel they made their "pitch" last year and fell short. Cardinal pitching isn't quite good enough. Having Bob Gibson all season long will help and if Dick Groat at shortstop has another great year, it will enhance the club's chances. Bill White, Curt Flood and Ken Boyer are hard for any club to handle. All are top grade ball players. Washburn, a young and promising pitcher, is tabbed hot stuff. He is considered by scouts as a sort of whiz kid. He had a sore arm part of the 1963 season and there is no guarantee his arm won't continue to bother him in 1964.

Cincinnati is a contender, though the state of Freddie Hutchison's health will be an important factor. Joey Jay and Bob Purkey, star pitchers, will have to come all the way back if the Reds are to figure. But the Reds have a lot of pitching anyway. Jim Maloney is great.

FELIPE ALOU should help Milwaukee. They'll have a lot of pitching unless something happens to Warren Spahn — and, of course, speaking of contenders the big "tout" is the Philadelphia Phillies. Personally, I don't put them that high but they have a good front line in pitchers Mahaffey, Bennett, Hamilton, McLish, Culp and three or four whiz kid flingers, yet untried. But except for Callison and Gonzales they have no TOP PLAYERS. They'll be tough in any one game but third or fourth place strikes me as about the best they can do over the long haul.

For the balance of the league there isn't too much. Pittsburgh is going through that transition stage and the Chicago Cubs, after losing Kenny Hubbs, star infielder, haven't enough to challenge. Still, as the league is rigged, it is going to be easier for any team to finish seventh than it is first. A slumping team could drop fast and far.

THE N.Y. METS and Houston Colts can be forgotten as 1964 flag contenders. They'll annoy all the clubs, at one time or other. In fact the new stadium at Houston may pose problems for the Colts they hadn't figured on. Houston's trick pitchers, those knuckle ballers, are at their trickiest in the hot, humid cities. The new dome stadium is to be air conditioned and just might not be so good for the Harry Craft-Paul Richard combination.

It is difficult at this stage of the season to align the clubs in their proper rank. It'll be sometime yet before the exact identity of the 10 clubs will be definitely known. And when they are set and ready and awaiting the gong, we'll prepare our annual handicap rating them on what they look like in 1964.

OH, THOSE POOR METS

Cruel, Cruel Blow

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

The team that can least afford it has been hit with the cruelist blow of the spring training season.

The New York Mets, who need every good break they can get, got a really bad one yesterday when star pitcher Carlton Willey suffered a broken jaw and was lost to the team indefinitely.

Willey, who had pitched 22 consecutive scoreless innings this spring, was hit by a line drive off the bat of rookie Gates Brown in the sixth inning of the Mets' 9-1 victory over the Detroit Tigers. He was taken to St. Anthony's Hospital in St. Petersburg, Fla., where Dr. Fred C. Nichols wired the jaw shut and said he will be sidelined indefinitely.

TO MISS OPENER

The injury means that Willey, 9-10 with the futile Mets in 1963, will be unable to handle his anticipated opening-day pitching assignment and will be a question mark as far as effectiveness is concerned for some time.

Rookie Tony Conigliaro singled home the winning run in the 12th inning to give the Boston Red Sox a 3-2 win over the Los Angeles Angels. Lee Thomas knocked in both Los Angeles runs, including the tying run in the ninth with a single off Dick Radatz.

Wes Covington's two-run fifth-inning homer paced the Philadelphia Phillies to a 5-4 triumph over the Kansas City Athletics. Nelson Mathews and Jim Hughes homered for the Athletics.

Bob Bailey and Julio Gotay hit homers as the Pittsburg Pirates whipped the St. Louis Cardinals, 12-5. The Pirates conked Lew Burdette for eight runs and 11 hits in three innings. Bob Veale went seven innings for the Pirates, allowing two runs and eight of St. Louis' 13 hits.

DODGERS BREEZE

The Los Angeles Dodgers scored seven runs in the fourth inning and downed the Cincinnati Reds, 12-2, to hand the 1961 league champions their ninth straight loss in games with National League rivals. Frank Howard, making his first start in right field for the Dodgers, had two singles in five at bats.

Home runs by Vic Power and Don Mincher paced an 18-hit attack that carried the Minnesota Twins to a 12-3 win over the Milwaukee Braves, who had won 15 of 18 previous games.

Snead Still Leads By Three At Greensboro

GREENSBORO, N. C.—Sam Snead, 51-year-old PGA seniors champion, retained his three-stroke lead in the Greater Greensboro Open gold tournament yesterday with a par 71 round over the blustery Sedgefield Country Club course.

That gave him a 36-hole total of 135 following his brilliant 64 opening round on Thursday.

Three strokes behind Snead going into today's third round were Julius Boros of Mid Pines, N. C., 1963 player of the year, and little Billy Dunk of Gosford, Australia, each with 138. At 139 came defending Master and PGA champion Jack Nicklaus after carding a 69 yesterday.

Bunched at 140 were Al Johnston of Canada, Al Geiberger, Larry Mowry and Bob Shave Jr.

Arnold Palmer the PGA's top money winner last year but a major disappointment so far in 1964, skied to a 75 yesterday for a 145 total, 10 strokes off the pace.

Stanford Shades Cal's Bears, 5-4

BERKELEY (AP) — The Stanford Indians try for their second California Intercollegiate Baseball Assn. win of the year today at the University of California.

The Indians got their initial league win yesterday, topping the Bears 5-4 on the Stanford diamond. Right-hander Dick Kovacevick was the winning pitcher, throwing no-hit ball for the last six innings.

Batting honors went to Stanford's first baseman, Pete Middlekaus, who batted two for four and knocked in two runs.

Former 49er Signs Canadian Contract

DEGINA, Sask. (AP) — Two American ends, Hugh Campbell and Dick Cohee, have signed for another season with the Saskatchewan Roughriders of the Western Football Conference, the Canadian club said today. Campbell, Washington State, was a top draft choice of the San Francisco 49ers but failed to make the grade with the National Football League team.

Baseball Tryouts For M.V. Team

Mill Valley Merchants semi-pro baseball club will conduct tryouts tomorrow, 1 p.m., at Mill Valley's Project 17 park, Manager Bob Selna reported today.

"Anyone interested in playing for us this season is welcome to come to the tryouts," said Selna, starting his fifth season as field boss of the Merchants.

San Anselmo Plays Oakland '9' Tomorrow

Manager Pete Maggi of the San Anselmo Merchants will send righthander Steve Miller to the mound tomorrow against the Melody Ramblers of Oakland in their practice semi-pro baseball game at San Anselmo's Memorial Park, at 1:30 p.m.

Sulgar Pitches Cadets Victory

Multi-talented Jim Sulgar, an All-League star in football, baseball and basketball, struck out 14 batters yesterday as he pitched the San Rafael Military Academy Cadets to a 5-0 victory over Concordia in Bay County League game at Concordia.

It was the Cadets' and Sulgar's second league victory without defeat to top the league. A triple and single and run batted in by Ron Kassis, two singles by Dick Thompson and solo hits by Sulgar, Dick Allen and Bill Breton led the Cadet attack.

San Rafael Swimmers, Redwood Trackmen Blast Foes

Giants Cindermen Crunch Marin Catholic Team, 112-10

After the second round of Marin Athletic League track and field meets were completed yesterday, undefeated Redwood and San Rafael high schools stand at the top.

Redwood continued its top-heavy domination against Marin Catholic as it completely crushed the Wildcats, 112-10. San Rafael trackmen put the lid on a week for Bulldog sports with a 73-49 pasting of a good Novato squad. In the third MAL meet, Tamalpais dumped winless Terra Linda, 72-52.

Out at Giantsville, coach Tony Bailey's spikemen won every event in their varsity match with Marin Catholic, and allowed the stricken Wildcats just two second places in their lopsided win. Redwood swept all three places in eight of the thirteen events and also won the 880-yard relay.

The Red and Gray varsity was led by record breaking efforts in the high jump by Collie Janda, who went 6-1¼, and in the relay. John Murk, Pete Holter, Dave Auerbach, and Tom Strathairn sped to a time of 1:-31.7 in the relay to set the school mark.

Strathairn, a hurdler, won the 220-yard dash to go with a win in the 120 high hurdles. He stayed around to place third in the high jump to bring his personal contribution to the score to sixteen points.

Highlight of the day for an outclassed Marin Catholic team was the bus ride over to Redwood under bright blue skies. The deluge was to hit later.

In San Rafael, the Bulldogs were having a little more trouble with a Novato team which, the week before, had beaten Terra Linda with ease. Still, San Rafael came up with more than enough to clinch the victory and pave the way for a headlong clash with the boys from Larkspur on April 21.

Bob Olson, as usual, turned in sparkling times in the two dashes as he won the 100-yard dash in 10.1 and turned the 220-yarder in 22.4. His speed was not enough in the 880-yard relay though, as Novato, anchored by star hurdler Ron Otis, put together the winning time of 1:37.1 in that event.

The story of the meet was in the winner's circle. San Rafael turned the victory trick nine out of fourteen times to create the winning margin.

Elis Williams of Tamalpais shook off pain from an injured leg and hobbled to a double victory in the sprints to lead the Indians to their win over Terra Linda. While Williams' times were unimpressive, if he ever returns to pre-league form, he should be a real danger to the other speedsters in the county. Williams was fit enough, besides winning the sprints, to make it a three-bagger as he leaped to 22.3 in the broad jump for five more points.

Hapless Terra Linda managed only five firsts in the varsity meet, but showed enough depth to make the score respectable. Sayer won the pole vault for the Trojans with an 11-5 jump, while Edwards turned in with a time of 54.2 to win the 440-yard dash.

Where goes the varsity, so goes the B teams. This was the story yesterday as all the B's won along with their A's. Redwood's Bees skinned the Wildcats 79-34, mirroring the varsity slaughter. Wardell was a double hurdle winner for the Giants and set a B record for Redwood in the 120 low hurdles with a time of 14.0. Lane Bowman was another record breaker for the winners as he topped eleven feet in the pole vault.

San Rafael got the Class B victory, 69-44, over Novato. The little Bulldogs took eight out of 13 events to take the best end of the score.

Down in Mill Valley, the Indian B team beat Terra Linda 67-43.

HAPPY WINNER—San Rafael's Jim Allen smiles up at coach Larry Lack after scoring twin wins in yesterday's meet against Redwood. Allen, one of the top swimmers in the Marin Athletic League, won both the 200-yard and 400-yard freestyle events.

Bulldogs Splash To 75-20 Victory Against Redwood

San Rafael High School's swim team continued its domination of the Marin Athletic League yesterday with a 75-20 pasting of Redwood in the San Rafael pool.

In the other league match of the day, Drake downed Terra Linda 53-41 in the Drake pool. In Class B action, San Rafael walloped Redwood 70-16 and Terra Linda blasted Drake, 61-24.

San Rafael's classic swimmers splashed to victories in all but one event, the 50-yard freestyle which was won by Redwood's Don Kreuzberger.

TOPS RECORD

Eric Phillips of San Rafael bettered his own school record in the 100-yard breast stroke when he swam it in 1:08.9. His previous record set this year was 1:09.0.

Double winners for San Rafael were Jim Allen and Tom Knopf. Allen won the 200-yard freestyle in 1:57.5 and the 400 free in 4:30.1 and Knopf triumphed in the 200 individual medley (2:18.0) and 100-yard butterfly (58.8).

In San Rafael's Class B triumph, the Bullpups were led by freestyler Dave Strauss who won the 50-yard free in 24.4 and the 100 free in 55.1. Bill Pandiani won the 100-yard breaststroke in 1:13.3 and tied for first in the 100-yard individual medley with a time of 1:08. The Class B swimmers for San Rafael also won all but one event.

ANOTHER RECORD

In the Drake-Terra Linda meet, Drake's George Girvin established a new school record in the 100-yard butterfly event when he was clocked at 58.1. He is only a junior so will get quite a few more chances to better his own mark.

Drake also had a pair of double winners, freshman Gary Trowbridge and Dusty Benedict. Trowbridge won the 200-yard individual medley in 2:28.2 and the 100-yard backstroke in 1:06.2. Quite a job for a freshman.

Benedict took firsts in the 50-yard freestyle (25.2) and the 400-yard free (4:53.3).

Terra Linda won the 200-yard medley relay after a wrong turn by one of the Drake swimmers caused a disqualification. Drake had won the race, but the disqualification gave the event to the Trojans.

In the lopsided Terra Linda victory in the Class C battle, the Trojans won all but one event from Drake.

Varsity scoring:

San Rafael, 75; Redwood, 20.

200 medley relay — San Rafael (Thompson, Phillips, Thomson, and St. Gaudens) 1:55.0.

200 freestyle—Allen (S.R.), Tegeler (S.R.), Keller (R) 1:57.5.

50 freestyle — Kreuzberger (R), Barry (R), Menne (S.R.) 24.7.

Redwood, Tam Baseballers Win Practice Game Action

Marin high school baseball teams played in five practice games yesterday and came out with two wins.

Redwood and Tamalpais High Schools got fine pitching and timely hitting—although in the Giant's game it was hitting all the time—to be the only Marin prep victors on the diamonds.

Redwood hurler Scott Murphy struck out nine and allowed four hits to hold Hogan to two runs, both on a homer which came in the sixth inning. Giant bats had already done enough damage by then, however, as Murphy, LeBeck and Don Roby combined for five hits and four runs. The Redwood team, Marin Athletic League baseball tourney champions, had racked up seven runs by the fourth inning and just coasted behind Murphy for the final 8-2 victory.

Tamalpais High School got just two hits against their Jefferson High opponents, but Steve Daniels of the Indians allowed only one hit and struck out 14 to get the win. The Mill Valley boys made their pair of singles into two runs, enough for a 2-1 triumph. Daniels, a senior, showed great promise in the League tournament, and the Indians are counting on him to give them just the boost they need to win the overall title.

CLOSE GAMES

While no other prep team won, no team was badly defeated. Terra Linda was shut out in its contest with El Camino of South San Francisco, 1-0 in another battle of the moundsmen. The Trojans now have a record of three wins, four losses and one tie in eight practice tilts, and, after their 8-0 pasting of Drake in the tournament, can look forward to a good season in the MAL.

The Pirates from Sir Francis Drake High School were knocked off, 4-2 by Vallejo. Both teams got five hits, but mental errors by the Marin team excluded the possibility of a come-from behind victory.

TARS TRIUMPH

While San Rafael High lost its practice game, the win stayed in the county. The College of Marin junior varsity edged the Bulldogs, 7-5, staving off a seventh inning rally by the Red and White. San Rafael used four pitchers to stop the Tars, and came up with three runs in their last at bat, but all was in vain. Marin put together six runs in the second and third innings and held on for the win.

Marin Netmen Win One, Lose Two In Practice

In three practice tennis matches yesterday, only Tamalpais High School's 4-3 victory over St. Ignatius saved Marin prep teams from total disaster.

In the other two matches, San Rafael lost to El Camino of South San Francisco, 4-3 and Novato preserved its perfect record in its past three matches by losing again, 5-0, in a contest with Petaluma.

Out at Golden Gate Park, the Indians won two singles matches and took two doubles matches to earn the triumph. Joe Friedman defeated Skip O'Connor, 6-1, 6-2; Scott Laurie defeated Joe Benjamin, 6-3, 8-6, 6-1, and the doubles team of Wiese and Ziegler beat Collaco and Castelini, 6-0, 6-2. The second doubles team for Tamalpais was also a winner as Brink and Canhan beat Lynch and Richie, 6-3, 6-4.

San Rafael winners were Greg Parkerson, who won 6-1, 6-1; Ron Klyce, by scores of 6-2 and 6-1; and Howard Cohen, who took a 6-4, 6-2 victory.

The Novato coach, Gerrold Moore, definitely discouraged by his team's performance lately, hopes to see a change in score next week when his netmen have a return match with the northern school.

LIKE A SWAN—San Rafael High School's diving star, John Strider, shows the form of the swan in this dive during yesterday's meet with Redwood. It was form like this that gave Strider a victory in the diving event.

Rodriguez Wins Decision In Listless Video Fight

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Luis Rodriguez mixed his lightning-like speed with years of ringmanship to score a unanimous decision over Jesse Smith of Philadelphia in a listless 10-round fight last night.

For Rodriguez it was his 56th ring victory in 59 appearances. The former Cuban fighting out of Miami outboxed the Philadelphian all the way.

Nobody was hurt seriously in the dancing duel, although Rodriguez suffered a slight cut over an eye. It was quickly patched up.

Smith, one-time sparring partner for Sonny Liston when the former heavyweight boxing champion was looking for a speedy opponent, now has won 36 fights in 45 appearances. He came out of this one unscathed after taking countless left jabs to the face and body.

There were no knockdowns and if the nationwide television audience saw Smith go down in the fifth it was because he slipped, went to his knees and was up before referee Jimmy Peerless could begin counting.

The biggest ringside audience since the Ralph Dupas—Sugar Ray Robinson fight last spring—except for the Cassius Clay-Liston fight in the Convention Hall next door last February—saw the fight.

Catholics Seeking School Solution

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

In 1884, the Roman Catholic bishops of the United States met at Baltimore, Md., and adopted an historic declaration:

"Near each church where there is no parochial school, one shall be established . . . all parents shall be bound to send their children to a parochial school."

In the 60 years since that policy was decreed, American Catholics have built the world's largest private school system. Today it includes more than 13,000 elementary and secondary schools, with a replacement cost estimated at seven billion dollars. It is educating 5,565,000 students—one-eighth of all the nation's children. It costs Catholics about 825 million dollars a year to maintain, and by their calculations, saves the taxpayers upwards of 2.7 billion dollars a year.

In spite of this massive effort, Catholics have never come close to the goal set by the Baltimore council: "Every Catholic child in a Catholic school."

Nearly 60 per cent of the nation's Catholic children are now attending public schools. And the percentage enrolled in parochial schools is shrinking rather than growing. Last month the Archdiocese of Cincinnati announced that it would drop the first grades of its 149 parochial schools next fall. Ten other U.S. archdioceses and dioceses have already taken steps to curtail lower grades.

Even with this kind of retrenchment, Catholic school systems across the nation are running into serious difficulties. They can't get enough nuns for their teaching staffs, so they are compelled to compete with public schools in hiring salaried lay teachers. They have been building new classrooms as fast as the money is available but not quite as fast as the Catholic youth population is growing.

The inevitable result is understaffing and overcrowding. Many Catholic schools today have 50 children per classroom, compared to 25 or 30 in public schools.

There is widespread agreement among Catholics that something has to be done about parochial schools. But what? Four possibilities are currently being debated in the Catholic community. They are:

1. Abandon the whole parochial school system, send all Catholic children to public schools, and concentrate the church's resources on the task of providing really first-rate religious education. This solution is proposed in a new book, "Are Parochial Schools the Answer?" (Holt, Rineheart and Winston), by Mary Perkins Ryan. Mrs. Ryan is a distinguished Catholic lay leader, a director of the National Liturgical Committee and an executive of the National Council of Catholic Women. Her book bears the imprimatur of Bishop Ernest J. Primeau of Manchester, N.H., who says in a foreword that Mrs. Ryan's "provocative" suggestion warrants intelligent discussion among Catholics, though "not a few will disagree" with her.

2. Eliminate the lower grades of parochial schools, and try to provide enough well-staffed Catholic high schools to accommodate all Catholic teen-agers. This plan was advanced by Archbishop Lawrence J. Sheehan of Baltimore. In situations where "it seems impossible to provide full Catholic education for all Catholic children," he said, it would be better to let parents oversee the religious training of younger children and focus the attention of church schools on adolescents.

3. Enroll Catholic children part-time in parochial schools, and part-time in public schools. This "shared time" plan has been warmly endorsed by major Protestant bodies, and many public school educators. Shared time experiments are now under way in about 150 American communities. Legislation is pending in Congress to provide federal aid funds to encourage such trials.

4. Obtain public funds for parochial schools. This solution is unquestionably the one that the Catholic hierarchy would prefer, if it should ever become politically feasible. Whether or when that day will arrive is a subject on which opinions differ sharply.

Some Catholic leaders feel that opposition to public support of parochial schools is gradually diminishing. They cite public opinion polls which indicate that a growing percentage of non-Catholics think it would be fair for the state to reimburse church-related schools for the secular educational functions they perform. They also point to the recent Church-State Study Conference at Columbus, Ohio, where delegates from 24 Protestant denominations agreed that "under some well-defined circumstances" government funds might be used to provide "health and welfare" services to parochial school students.

While this statement might be construed as a modification of Protestant attitudes on such long-disputed issues as bus transportation, it is also noteworthy that the Columbus conferees overwhelmingly reiterated their opposition to government support of the educational programs of church-related schools.

The interdenominational Protestant magazine Christian Century warned Catholics not to interpret the Columbus Conference as a sign that Protestants are about to "capitulate" on aid to parochial schools.

Writing in the Catholic magazine America this week, Archbishop Shehan agreed that "public help to the cause of parochial school education may still be in the distant future." But the Catholic prelate added that it no longer seems quite "so far away as it seemed a few years ago."

Can you tell which year VW is which? Bet your neighbors can't either.

It's pretty hard to tell a used VW from a new one. Particularly when it's been reconditioned, washed, polished and put in first-class running order, as we do.

Come in and pick out the one you want. We'll tell you its age. But you don't have to tell a soul. It'll be our secret.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Giant Stone Is Discovered In Bladder Of 71-Year-Old Farmer

VAN DELLEN

Several weeks ago we wrote about a woman who had a 47-pound uterine fibroid removed, and we mentioned tumors of the uterus twice this size. Recently another oddity came to our attention—a giant stone in the urinary bladder of a 71-year-old farmer. He had sought medical care because of a variety of urinary symptoms.

A plain X-ray of the abdomen flabbergasted the physicians—the entire pelvis was filled with a radio-density almost six inches in diameter. When the abdomen was opened, the surgeon could not insert his fingers on either side of the stone because it was too large.

He called for an obstetrical forceps but its use proved unsuccessful. The calculus formed a complete cast of the pelvic space and could not be moved.

THE SURGEON was forced to chip away and take out the rock piecemeal. It was dull and earthy in nature and weighed two pounds nine and one-half ounces. The urinary bladder was stretched and inflammed but otherwise was normal.

This is the third largest stone reported in medical literature. The winner was a 13 pound 14 ounce rock but it was not found in the bladder. The first and second prizes go to bladder stones weighing four pounds and three pounds 1.7 ounces, respectively.

THE OLD SAYING that all kinds of good things are illegal, immoral, or fattening came to mind when I read a recent item about licorice. This delight of my childhood is in the doghouse.

French clinicians report its adverse effect upon the blood pressure in persons who are sensitive to glycyrrhizen (licorice root). Symptoms of hypertension appeared in 25 alcoholics who were given a medicine containing this substance. They had no previous history of high blood pressure and the readings dropped as soon as they were taken off the compound. When it was resumed, up went the pressure.

Lest licorice lovers worry, remember the people in this series were chronic alcoholics and no attempt was made to determine whether other ingredients in the "cure" played a role.

(Dr. Van Dellen will answer questions on medical topics if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request.)

INCREASED HEMOGLOBIN

J. S. writes: Is there more than one kind of polycythemia?

REPLY

Yes. Some persons have too many red cells or too much hemoglobin (polycythemia) because of lung or heart disorders. In others it is associated with living at a high altitude. The cause of polycythemia vera is not known.

GENERALIZED INFECTION

J. O. L. writes: What is miliary tuberculosis?

REPLY

In this condition, various tissues of the body are studded with countless tubercular nodules. The chest X-ray looks like a snowstorm, each flake representing a clump of infected tissue.

WHY WE YAWN

A. M. writes: Please list the causes of excessive yawning.

REPLY

Poor ventilation, boredom, weariness, drowsiness, and suggestion are the most frequent origins. The symptom occurs also in pregnancy, anemia, and various disorders of the brain, including epilepsy.

LIVER DISEASES

R. E. writes: Does hepatitis cause cirrhosis of the liver?

REPLY

Yes, but inflammation is not a common cause of hardening of the liver. Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope for leaflet on cirrhosis of the liver.

Today's Health Hint—Burpers: Train yourself out of the habit.

REVIEW

Production Of Brazil Is Lavish

By KARL BARRON

It's a sure sign of spring when Gigi stops mothering her brood and presents her yearly spectacular for the Corte Madera Lions Club.

Pretty girls, glamorous costumes, and more pretty girls marked the debut of "Let's Go to Brazil" at the Corte Madera Recreation Center last night. It'll be repeated tonight and April 10 and 11. You'd probably prefer to go to Corte Madera than Brazil in view of the current headlines. The proceeds go toward more tennis courts.

Gigi (for the uninitiated, a beauteous Brazilian bomb married to banker B. A. Sill) has used a simple plot line to show off a huge group of dancers. They show well, with lavish costuming designed by Marlene Reinhart.

PLOT GIMMICK

The plot gimmick is based on a travel agent's attempt and success in selling a tour of Brazil to a typical American family, the Smiths — pronounced Smythe. (She tells her husband, "How many times have I told you not to call me Mabel in public.")

Music, collated on tape by Roy Trumbull, is well chosen and lively, but in the tape lies the inherent weakness of the show. For Gigi, to overcome bad acoustics, has taped all the dialogue which ties the acts together. The actors, Ernest Widlund, Margaret Nider, Cassie Frazer, Bill Barnet and Igor Sill, pantomine along with their own voices on tape.

Unfortunately, the dialogue is too long, and the pace too slow. Since the show is set and governed by what's on the tape, there is no way to correct the fault.

In addition, there is an almost total lack of humor. There are no sight gags and few in the dialogue.

QUITE GOOD

The dancing which makes up the bulk of the show is quite good. Credit for choreography goes to Renee Parker, Nancy Dunham, Maureen Coy, and Frances Tatarian. Mrs. Tatarian appears in an excellent interpretive solo — with an assist from Debussy.

Films play an interesting role in the show. The second act is tied together by a Varig Airlines travelogue, which is stopped to interpolate the stage numbers.

In the first act, "Jangadeiros," a popular Brazilian ballad about a fisherman lured to a watery death by a lorelei is illustrated by a short film incorporating the paintings of Ken Potter, who also designed well-integrated settings. Some of Potter's works were painted in Brazil, others especially for the film. The overall effect is reminiscent of early experimental films by James Broughton and the late Frank Stauffacher.

Demo Candidate Blasts Record Of Rep. Clausen

Merle P. Orchard, candidate for Democratic nomination for Congress, blasted the record of incumbent Don H. Clausen at a gathering of 40 Democratic women at the Sleepy Hollow home of Mrs. Alvin Goldstein yesterday.

"The present congressman has betrayed the people of the First District by voting against the Area Redevelopment Program, which ironically is needed most in his own backyard, Humboldt County," the Ukiah attorney declared.

Orchard said the incumbent had voted against every major piece of important legislation such as the space program, wheat sale to Russia, higher education construction bill, and initially against the tax cut.

"At this time of need, the incumbent and his group of 21 Congressmen, which has dubbed itself the 'Paul Revere Panel,' has been galloping across the country making speeches in Albuquerque, Los Angeles, and Denver," Orchard charged. "Where is he? Operating a political machine show. That's the kind of representation we now have for the First District."

'WHAT'YA DOIN' UP THERE?'—Fireman Al Jones watches from ground as fireman Ralph Pederson and George Chappell of Van Pelt Fire Truck Co. ride the basket of Sausalito Fire Department's new "snorkel" truck The highly maneuverable 65-foot boom enables firemen to get at blazes that could not be reached by other apparatus.
(Independent-Journal photo)

Firemen In Sausalito Learn About 'Snorkel'

Sausalito firemen are "going to school" on their brand new $40,000 "snorkel" fire apparatus.

The first such equipment in Marin County, according to Fire Chief Mathew J. Perry, the truck has a 65-foot boom, called a snorkel, which goes up into the air with one to four men in the basket.

This type of equipment, introduced in Chicago about four years ago, is good for all our high rise apartments and for use on houses or apartments on Sausalito's steep hillsides, said Perry.

In the basket, which can be used to rescue people, there is a built-in deluge gun which shoots 500 to 750 gallons per minute, fog or straight stream.

Also in the aerial platform basket there is a two and one-half and one and one-half inch outlet. There is a one-inch hose reel for incipient fires which carries 100 feet of hose. There are a one-inch hose reel under the basket and a one and one-half inch fog nozzle controlled from the basket.

There are two mounted 500-watt flood lights, and the snorkel is provided with ground ladders plus a 3,000-watt, 110-volt generator.

The apparatus was built by Van Pelt Fire Truck Co. of Oakdale, Stanislaus County.

"When we get through surveying the city in May with the additional four firemen and the snorkel and our new fire station," said Perry, "we have a good chance of getting a terrific cut in insurance rates. We're 5-B now and have a good chance of going into 4-B."

Sausalito Attorney Sending City Goerndt Defense Bill

Sausalito attorney Harry S. Wainwright, who reportedly was told to "go jump in the bay" by Sausalito Mayor Paul Micou, is instead planning to send a bill to the city.

Wainwright wants to be paid for serving as counsel to former Police Chief Howard Goerndt during a board of review hearing on Goerndt's ouster last fall.

At the March 19 meeting of the Sausalito City Council, Councilman Jan Paul Dyk reported that Wainwright had asked for payment and Mayor Micou sent a letter saying, "The city doesn't owe you anything and you know it. I suggest you jump in the bay."

Wainwright, who was on a trip to the Orient at the time, replied to the mayor by letter: "I am now preparing my bill to the City of Sausalito for fees and costs in connection with the successful contest of Mr. Brown's (City Mgr. Charles A. Brown) attempt to discharge Sgt. Howard Goerndt. I do not propose to hold Sgt. Goerndt responsible for the obligation necessarily incurred as a result of Mr. Brown's rash and careless behavior."

Goerndt was fired as police chief by Brown and reinstated as a police sergeant after the hearings.

Wainwright said he has represented the Sausalito Employees Assn. for several years "without fee and without remuneration for costs expended," and that this work has been a source of personal satisfaction.

Wainwright contended that since Leland H. Jordan, attorney for the city, and Thomas C. Nelson, attorney for the board of review, were paid for their work during the hearings, he felt he should be paid.

Old Sewer Line Is On Agenda

Abandonment of the old Corte Madera Avenue sewer line will be discussed at Monday's 8 p.m. meeting of the Mill Valley city council. A new line has been installed.

Also on the agenda is appointment of an architect for the community and youth center at Project 17, a report on appraisal of Old Mill Park proposal library site and a hearing on the proposed rezoning of three parcels of land at the northwest corner of Camino Alto and East Blithedale from residential with minimum lots of 20,000 square feet to commercial.

At 7:30 p.m. the customary citizens forum will be held.

Theft Suspect Is Bound Over

Edward John Meyer, 52, charged with theft of a spare wheel lock, was bound over to Marin Superior Court yesterday for trial.

Hearing will be at 9:30 a.m. April 13.

Meyer, of 38-B Jessup Street, San Rafael, was arrested March 24 by San Rafael police in the alleged theft from Wayne M. Bongean, 930 George Street, Novato, at a parking lot at Third and Cijos Streets.

He has a prior felony conviction, according to the complaint.

Poll Shows Lodge Favored In California

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—While the name of Henry Cabot Lodge will not appear on the Republican ballot for presidential nominees in California's June 2 primary, the California Poll yesterday indicated rank and file Republicans prefer him to the three listed candidates.

Only New York Gov. Nelson Rockefeller, Arizona Sen. Barry Goldwater and Harold Stassen are on the GOP ballot.

The poll directed by Mervin D. Field said Republicans for the most part favor Goldwater over either Rockefeller or Stassen.

However, among just those who like Lodge, present ambassador to South Vietnam and surprise write-in victor in the New Hampshire primary last month, the preference was for Rockefeller over Goldwater or Stassen.

The poll said GOP voters also expressed high regard for former Vice President Richard M. Nixon. Nixon, like Lodge is not on the California ballot. No write-ins are permissible.

First choice among all Republican voters queried, the poll said, showed Lodge favored by 31 per cent, Goldwater by 25 per cent, Nixon by 21 per cent and Rockefeller by 12 per cent.

Gov. George Romney of Michigan, Gov. William Scranton of Pennsylvania, Sen. Margaret Chase Smith of Maine and Stassen ranged downward from 3 per cent.

Among those whose first choice was Lodge, and were pressed for a pick excluding him, the percentage went like this: for Rockefeller 39, Goldwater 26, Stassen 13 and, unable to make a choice now, 22.

Aide Is Named For Rockefeller

Mrs. James (Maloa) Trimble of Tiburon, active in Republican politics, is vice chairman of the Rockefeller for President campaign in Marin.

Ken MacDonald, Marin County chairman, announced the appointment of Mrs. Trimble today. She is manager of an import business in Mill Valley. She lives with her husband and three small children.

Mrs. Trimble said she feels that a vast majority of Republicans have allowed a small vocal minority to presume to represent them. "The views of this small vocal minority representing extreme positions are not shared by the Republican Party in general," she added. "It is absolutely necessary to overcome the complacency that has existed among the moderate Republicans."

Spreading Tracts At Base Of Tiburon Peninsula

New homes and apartments are springing up on the route to Tiburon. This aerial view shows only part of the development.

In foreground, at edge of sheltered cove, is the Cove Development with channel leading from docks to the head of Richardson Bay.

Trestle Glen Boulevard leads east to join Paradise Drive along the shore of San Francisco Bay. Paradise Cay appears as light area of filled land in upper center of picture.

This photo shows how homes and apartments are being developed first in low lands near the shore. Hillside lands, calling for more expensive site development, are still open.

An Expert Speaks On The Stock Market

Some Mistakes To Be Avoided By The Inexperienced Investor

By DON KEOWN

What are the most common mistakes made by non-professional investors?

A professional, William F. Crawford of Sleepy Hollow, an account manager and publisher of the investment report Crawford Growth Stocks, lists these five frequently-committed and costly errors:

1. All too often, the inexperienced buy too late and sell too late.

2. Many such investors base their decisions on emotional factors instead of analytical reasoning.

3. Small investors often fail to keep themselves informed about the companies in whose future they have invested.

4. Too many investors "fall in love" with their investments, and pass up opportunities for profits.

5. Either over or under diversification can prove expensive.

CRAWFORD speaks as owner and publisher of an advisory service whose circulation now stands at approximately 1,000 subscribers after four years of publication.

Crawford's service is one of two investment guidance reports based in Marin. Also produced in this county is Investment Indicators, by Mitchell Morse and Schwab of San Rafael.

Crawford's interest in the market dates back to his freshman year at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute in Troy, N.Y., where he earned a degree in business administration. His father had died, leaving his mother a small inheritance of stocks and bonds. Her son began managing those holdings. He did so well that soon he began taking a keen interest in stocks and making small investments of his own.

"I FOUND the whole thing fascinating," he says.

After college, he tried for a job on Wall Street, but the depression had curtailed such opportunities. After a brief period in retailing, he wound up in the accounting field and finally went to work for the Durkee Famous Foods Division of The Glidden Co.

Transferred from New York to Cleveland, he became division controller.

The year 1957 was to prove important for Crawford. It was then that he and a friend learned of an investment opportunity in the Jim Walter Corp., builders of shell homes in Florida. While the firm was virtually unknown to the general public, a careful investigation convinced Crawford and his friend that here was "the kind of opportunity investors spend their lives searching for."

STOCK purchase warrants accumulated by Crawford and his friend at $3 per share entitled them to buy stock later at $30 a share after the market value had climbed to $60. The pair then exercised their options or sold the warrants.

In addition to that profitable transaction, 1957 was noteworthy for Crawford because of a business trip that brought him West for Durkee. "I was flabbergasted with California," he remembers. He returned east, determined to move to the West Coast. A vacation trip to California enabled his wife, Ruth, to see the country for herself. She, too, was favorably impressed.

So in November 1958, the Crawfords came to California to stay. For a time Crawford handled special assignments for Durkee, commuting between their home in Sleepy Hollow and San Francisco. Then in January of 1959 he became a security analyst for Dean Witter and Co. to gain investment experience.

AFTER NINE months with Witter, he was ready to go into the investment counseling business for himself. At the outset, his office was located in the Sleepy Hollow home where the Crawfords still reside with their two children—W. Deane, 14, and Erica June, 12.

The enterprise, got off to a slow start because of the bear market at the time. At the end of his first year of operations, he still had only 55 subscribers.

Then in January, 1961, a new bull market commenced. Stocks Crawford had been recommending "suddenly took off like rockets." And Crawford began expanding his activities.

Soon, even with the help of his wife, he was unable to keep up with his business. He began adding employees, and within a short time five people were working in the Crawford home.

THEN, IN February of 1962, Crawford moved his firm into its present offices in the Fair-Anselm Shopping Center, Fairfax.

There, Crawford's right-hand man is a friend from the East, Lawrence G. (Larry) Williams, formerly with Shearson, Hammill in New York City and now Crawford's senior security analyst.

The bear market break of May, 1962, brought Crawford Growth Stocks expansion to a halt for a time. But now, the owner says, a new promotion and advertising program is under way "and we are on the move again."

But back to those "most common mistakes" committed by non-professional investors:

CRAWFORD says the tendency to buy too late stems from the fact that often their attention is not attracted until a stock has climbed substantially and received publicity.

"In other words," he says, "they tend to become most active in the stock market in the latter stages of a bull market. This means they frequently buy speculative, overpriced stocks much too late. And they do that just at the time when many more knowing professionals are beginning to sell, at large profits, the stocks they bought many months earlier.

"Then as the market reaches a top and starts to decline, all too often the non-professionals increase their buying, thinking that because many stocks are down from their former highs, they are obtaining bargains.

"THEY OFTEN continue to buy until a bear market is well under way, and most of the stocks they purchased are down substantially. Then, most unfortunately, near the bottom of the bear market, just at the time when they should be buying rather than selling, deep disillusionment sets in and they become persistent sellers. And they do not move back to the buying side until the biggest and safest part of the new bull market is already over."

In too many cases, Crawford continues, stocks are bought without real understanding of the company's management, products and prospects, and often without knowledge as to the price of the stock relative to its current and projected earnings.

Perhaps a hot tip from some one seemingly close to the company with some "inside news" supposedly not generally known by the public will influence them to buy "blindly."

IT ISN'T until later they learn that on an analytical basis, the stock they purchased was grossly overpriced.

Investors should, Crawford stresses, read and understand the financial statements released by companies in which they have an interest.

And they should remain in contact with the broker or other individual who first convinced them to buy the stock. Otherwise they may find themselves holding onto a stock when careful analysis would indicate it should be sold, or, conversely, selling a stock when it should be held.

"The tendency to procrastinate causes a great many investors to obtain poor market results," Crawford says.

VERY OFTEN the cause for delay in disposing of a stock that has gone sour is the very human reluctance to take the loss. But as such poor-acting stocks continue to drop, the loss is compounded. And money remains tied up in a poor investment, whereas it might be put to profitable use elsewhere.

"Yet, on the other side of the coin," Crawford says, "the very same investors sometimes can't resist grabbing at a small profit. When they buy a stock that acts well, even though the company is making good progress, they settle for a small profit. If they continued to hold such a stock, they might well enjoy substantial gains."

Keeping the bad ones and selling the good ones can be the sure road to investment failure, Crawford declares.

INVESTORS sometimes "fall in love" with their investments. In some cases, by good planning or luck, they buy a stock that gives them a gain of 100 per cent or more. Delighted, they understandably regard the concern as one of the best run companies in the world. This could be true. But it could also be true that emotional buying has run the price up to an unrealistic level not justified by earnings and prospects.

"And when this happens, the day of reckoning is going to come," Crawford warns. "Then unfortunately, the holder who fell in love with his stock and held on may wind up, a few years later, with a modest or even a good profit that is only a fraction of what he once had, simply because he couldn't part with a wonderful winner."

INVESTORS who over-diversify are acting on the idea that the sure way to avoid market losses is to spread their risks, Crawford says. They take a relatively small amount of money and split it up into a lot of pieces, putting a little bit into many different stocks.

They then wind up paying commissions that are relatively high on each of these small investments, and are unable to keep track of all the companies they should be following closely.

"Over - diversification will almost certainly lead to medi-

Investments Are His Business

Marin Man's Advisory Service Reaches 1,000 Subscribers

WHILE institutional investors have become heavy net buyers in the stock market, individuals have become net sellers. And this, says William F. Crawford, is the principal reason why the Dow Jones Average, reflecting the larger blue chip stocks, is at an all-time high while the stocks of many smaller concerns have shown no such rise. Institutions — pension funds, trusts, etc. — tend to buy conservatively and cautiously, thus favoring the larger, better-known companies. Crawford, however, sees a brighter future for the stocks of the smaller businesses.

ocre or poor results," Crawford asserts.

THERE IS the reverse side of that picture — the investor who goes "whole hog" into one situation in the belief he has a "sure thing." Such a heavy investment in a single firm is hazardous.

"This doesn't mean that some one who fully understands the risks involved should never plunge. But they should be sure that the situation has been checked inside and out."

Crawford's advice to the small investor:

He should seek competent advice from some one experienced if he is not.

HE WOULD be well advised not to try to make money in the market by trading. Most profits from this technique are accrued by professionals who have devoted years of time and study to this type of operation and who have a special aptitude for it. The nonprofessional is more likely to wind up with ulcers than profits.

He should formulate a consistent investment plan—and stick to it.

He should never invest money he may need in a hurry, keeping aside adequate reserves so that he will not have to sell his stocks prematurely to meet an emergency need.

THE INVESTOR not qualified by nature or experience to pick stocks soundly and determine the best buying and selling time can look to several sources for professional help. He can go to a reliable brokerage firm, he can buy into a mutual fund, he can subscribe to and follow the advice of an investment advisory service such as Crawford Growth Stocks and Investment Indicators, or he can let a professional security manager handle his investments for him. Many brokerage firms, most banks and independent investment advisers will handle management accounts, although many restrict this service to relatively large accounts.

Crawford says the question he most frequently encounters about today's stock market is this:

"With the Dow Jones Industrial Average at an all-time high, why are the stocks of so many investors considerably under previous highs?"

IN ANSWERING that question, Crawford points out that the Dow Jones Average reflects only 30 stocks "which include the industrial giants of the country," and that it covers only stocks listed in the New York Stock Exchange.

The current high, he continues, has been caused largely by a relatively few stocks. Two automobile stocks, Chrysler Corp. and General Motors, have been responsible for a good part of the increase in the average.

But many investors, and especially those who made their first stock purchases during the 1961 bull market, did not buy the big blue chip stocks. Instead they invested in the smaller, low-priced new issues — especially the electronic and other so-called "glamour" stocks. And a great many of these stocks are still well below their late 1961-early 1962 prices.

"INVESTORS who hold them are understandably cynical and unbelieving when they hear talk of new all-time highs in stocks," Crawford says. "It is small wonder that many, in disgust and discouragement, have sold their stocks, taken their losses, put their money in savings accounts and sworn never again to buy stocks."

What we actually have today is two markets, Crawford explains. One is the big, popular blue chip stocks selling at all-time highs. The other is the lower-priced stocks of smaller, lesser-known companies.

Crawford says that one reason many of the smaller "glamour" stocks have not recovered much in price is that they were overpriced in the 1961-62 period.

A MORE important reason, however, is that net stock purchases by individuals have been declining since 1955. Individuals were actually net sellers in 1960 and again more heavily in 1962 (see chart) with net selling increasing by a billion and a half dollars in the latter year. Final figures are not yet available for 1963,

Analytical Reasoning And Experience Are The Cornerstones For Success

but apparently net selling was again substantial last year.

With this exodus from the market of individuals, how then could even the blue chip stocks have risen to such an extent?

The answer, Crawford says, is, as the graph indicates, the increasing role of institutional investors as heavy net buyers. "Institutional investors" covers closed-end investment trusts, open-end funds, pension funds, banks, insurance companies, and health, welfare and endowment funds. Their buying has more than offset reduced purchasing by individuals. Non-insured pension funds alone accounted for half the total 1962 institutional net purchases of four billion dollars.

ALL THESE institutional buyers are purchasing for the very long term. Either by regulation or tradition, they take the cautious, conservative path, sticking to the stocks of the well-known companies.

In addition, most have so many millions of dollars to invest that they do not regard it as worth while to bother with any single investment in which they cannot make a substantial purchase of a million dollars or more.

There are, however, Crawford says, indications of a change.

Blue chip stocks have now risen to the point where many are selling at historically high prices relative to earnings. More and more institutions are buying more of the "secondary" stocks, fewer of the blue chips.

IN ADDITION, the public is beginning to re-enter the market. The initial re-entry has been felt largely by the big companies, but the smaller firms are starting to benefit.

Crawford makes these two predictions:

1. The Dow Jones Average will go to 1,000 before the present bull market is over, despite the fact that, historically, this has already been a long bull market. "If the current economic expansion does not get out of hand and generate so wild a boom that an early correction must come, 1965 earnings might well be up considerably," he says. "Thus, in 1965, the Dow Jones Average might soar well beyond the 1,000 mark."

2. Secondary stocks will participate in the big advance with increased patronage from the institutional investors and with greater public participation in the market.

"IT IS my opinion," Crawford says, "that a great many of the good, soundly-managed companies that have not yet significantly participated in this bull market will soon have their day."

Whether the individual investor profits from future developments will largely depend, Crawford adds, on how well he avoids those five critical pitfalls of the inexperienced which were listed at the outset of this article.

Portrait Of A San Rafael Pioneer

John R. Walsh Was Familiar Figure At Turn Of Century

(Editor's Note: This is another in a series of recollections of San Rafael in the early 1900s, written for the Independent-Journal Marin Magazine by early-day Marin resident W. T. Ortman.)

By W. T. ORTMAN

This is the story of San Rafael pioneer John R. Walsh, who first came to this country from Ireland in 1851 and first settled in the South.

There he married and became the father of a son.

John Walsh was caught in the Confederacy when the war between the states broke out. He was not in sympathy with the South, disliking slavery, but was drafted into the Confederate army in 1863.

By some quirk of fate, he never fired a shot in that war, and was taken prisoner when his regiment was rushed to the defense of Atlanta. Imprisoned first at Rock Island, Ill., and later at Camp Butler, he nearly starved when rations were drastically reduced in retaliation for the mistreatment of Union soldiers held prisoners at Libby Prison. The months of starvation further embittered Walsh against the South.

WHEN WAR ended, he returned home to find that his wife had died of hunger and that his son was being cared for by her relatives. He left for the West with the promise to send money for the boy's support.

Walsh went first to Nevada where he worked as a miner on the Comstock Lode. Two years later he moved on to San Francisco, a rough and burly miner in a boomtown. Streets were filled with people, and no hotel rooms could be had.

For a week he spent his time along the waterfront, sleeping at nights in a chair tilted against the back wall of a barroom.

"It was the greatest wonder in the world that I wasn't rolled for my money, or shanghaied onto a ship headed for the Orient," he would say in later years.

THEN IN late October of 1868, John Walsh arrived in San Rafael. The rowdy San Rafael Day celebration had just ended with its horse racing, dog and coyote fights, bear and bull fights and cock fights, and its gambling.

Walsh came by way of the new marsh road from Point San Quentin. The stagecoach terminal was at the Central Hotel, a three-story brick building then not yet two years old. There he had little trouble obtaining a room, for the gambling and carnival crowds attracted by the celebration were checking out.

B Street was a dirt road that began on the lower slopes of San Rafael Hill and then came down into the valley past the Frederick Pratt two-story building, on across Olema Road, and by the old Chinese onion farm. It rambled across the marsh and came to an abrupt end in a sweeping curve into Bay View Street.

ON THE WEST side of the dusty road, looking across the salt marshes to San Pablo Bay, a man named T. J. Mahon built a cabin in the year 1860. Some nine years later he sold the cottage and lot to Samuel Wynn.

There Wynn brewed beer and sold liquor. He called the place the San Rafael Brewing Depot.

"My first employment in San Rafael was with the San Rafael Brewing Depot," John Walsh would relate. Later the same building was to become Walsh's home.

WALSH LIKED to tell how Mahon had built the original cottage and lived there nearly 10 years while he subdivided and sold off his property in lots. Streets were built, drainage installed. And the quadrangle of land south of Second Street was called Mahon Addition.

"The lumber for the cottage was brought from San Francisco. It was lumber that came around the Horn from Maine," Walsh would relate. "There was no sawmill then in San Rafael, although Isaac Shaver built one a few years later in the west end and added a planing mill. The doors of the Mahon cottage, along with the window sash and frames, were milled, but the work had been done in the East."

Wynn bought the property for $50 and raised the cottage, building a barroom, storage building, bedroom, living room and kitchen beneath it.

OF WYNN, Walsh would say: "Sam was a fair-to-middling brewmaster. He had worked for San Francisco breweries. And we made beer, but we never distilled liquor."

In 1876 a Nicolas Mensing of San Francisco purchased the building and lot from Wynn for $835. Walsh continued to work at the small brewery, but Mensing was not satisfied with his purchase and wanted to sell the place.

PIONEER JOHN R. WALSH came to San Rafael in 1868 and lived here until his death in 1917. He was a familiar figure at the turn of the century, sitting in his chair in front of his B Street home. And he was the source of much information of San Rafael's early history. (Photo courtesy of Les Walsh)

"In the year 1878 I had bought a William T. Coleman lot at the corner of Mission and Grand for $510," Walsh went on. "It was a large lot, 50 by 156 feet. It was the first land I had ever owned, and I was very happy about the transaction.

"Then when Mensing wanted to sell his place on B, I bought it, too, for $1,300 in 1879.

"I BECAME enthused over being a landowner and I then bought lots 17 and 18 in block 20 in the Mahon addition. I paid $300 for them. And I continued buying other property, mostly from T. J. Mahon."

The Wynn and Mensing brewery-Mahon cottage served Walsh as his home for nearly 40 years.

I first came to know John Walsh around 1904 or 1905, when he was one of the oldest surviving pioneers in San Rafael. He spent most of his time in a chair at the side of the doorway to his home. There he sat, by the hour, gazing out over the marsh. When people went by, he would look up at them, nod his head, and say: "Howdy." Occasionally, those who were not too busy would stop and chat. This pleased John. Most of the people had become strangers to him, since his cronies had long since died or moved away.

AT THE TIME I was working for Bert Burham, who owned a grocery store next to Joe Bagley's butcher shop at the corner of Second and B. I drove the delivery wagon for Burham, and twice a day I would pass old John, sitting in front of his house. I would stop and talk with him, and I always enjoyed our conversations.

That speaking acquaintance, however, was not of long duration. About the time of the fire and earthquake in San Francisco, John Walsh was stricken with apoplexy. He was left speechless with his vocal chords paralyzed. Had this not happened, John Walsh would have been the source of much more valuable history of early San Rafael.

Prior to his tragedy, however, we had many talks about those earlier days.

ONE DAY he remarked: "Across the street, there in the marsh, is where the bull and bear fights and the horse racing were held on San Rafael Day. As the years went on, the party became rougher and rougher. And finally the town fathers stepped in and banned the celebration."

Fourth of July observances, however, remained much as before.

There were parades, firecrackers, decorations, a barbecue and dancing. Chinatown on C Street was our source of firecrackers. The Chinese there sold every type of firecracker there ever was, from ladyfinger to ear-splitting giants.

I THINK John Walsh was happy that Fourth of July, at least, had retained its character as a town celebration.

He also liked to reminisce about the San Rafael that was when he first arrived in 1868.

"There weren't more than 850 people here at the time," he would say, "because I remember that two years later they took a census and the official figure was 876.

"DOWN HERE on B Street, south of Second, my nearest and only neighbors besides William Barnard's Cosmopolitan Hotel were Adolph Gleske on the northeast corner of B and Second and Dick Bullis on the corner of A and Second.

"West of Barnard's place and across Second Street stood a two-story house in the middle of the block bounded by Second, Third and C that was built by convict labor. A prison official lived there.

"Diagonally across Third Street from the prison official's residence were the stables owned by Mike Murray. Mike had many horses. His two-story home faced Third between C and D, and on the corner of D and Third he had a well that supplied him with water for his horses and his household needs. The stable burned in 1880, the biggest fire San Rafael had had up to that time. It took four days and nights to put it out. But Mike saved all his horses.

"AND UP B Street a ways on the corner of Third, William N. Anderson built a butcher shop on the ground floor, and later added a grocery department. Upstairs, he ran a rooming house. (This building still stands.)

"In 1868, there was no church in San Rafael, and the old mission lay in ruins. A carpenter bought the mission for $40 and wrecked it for the wooden timbers in it."

"I believe that it was in 1870 that a church was built at the site of the old mission at the head of A street," John Walsh would say. "Father Hugh Lagan was the parish priest at the time. The church was built for 600 people, but it was soon apparent that the church wasn't large enough. Father Lagan had the church remodeled, and seating installed for 800 worshippers.

"LATER on, in 1899, Father Thomas Phillips came from St. Joseph's Church in Berkeley to succeed Father Lagan."

But on B south of Second there wasn't much doing. Mahon sold some lots, but purchasers seemed in no hurry to build. And B at that point was used only infrequently as an exit from town over Wolfe's Hill.

John R. Walsh lived the rest of his life in his B Street home. He loved San Rafael, and he was content.

WHEN I worked for the railroad in 1915-1916-1917, I roomed with the old gentleman. But his days as a source of historical data on early San Rafael were over by then, for he was speechless.

He still sat daily in his chair in his station in front of his home, going inside only when the weather became chill. And one November evening the sun went down, but John Walsh did not leave his chair and go inside as usual.

On Nov. 30, 1917, John R. Walsh had died in his beloved San Rafael, at the age of 86.

TODAY THE FORMER Marne Dunlap of Novato is Mrs. Samuel Laidig of Pasadena, mother of five children. But the piano still plays an important role in her life. She teaches piano, belongs to a chamber music group and encourages her children in their music. Above, she is seen with four of her youngsters, David, Marcia, Victoria and Jonathan. Baby Thomas is the youngest member of the family. Inset is Marne Dunlap as a San Rafael High School senior in 1935 when her talents won her a Marin Music Chest scholarship.

Thirty Years After Her Scholarship

Music Still Plays Important Role In The Life Of Marne Dunlap Laidig

Back in 1935, the Marin Music Chest was beginning to sprout its musical wings.

The idea of awarding scholarships to talented young Marin musicians, as well as presenting the great artists of concert and opera, leading symphony orchestras and ballet groups, became a reality that year. And among the first group of young people to receive a Music Chest scholarship was young Marne Dunlap of Novato.

THIS IS her story:

The scene is a farmhouse on Mill Road, two and a half miles from Novato and reached by a dusty country road. The owners of the farm, where they raised chickens, and sold eggs, pears and other produce from their large orchard, were Mr. and Mrs. John Dunlap who lived there with their five children.

In this setting, 16-year-old Marne, the oldest child and a senior at San Rafael High School, "enjoyed the freedom of the country life . . . especially being able to practice as early in the morning as I wished." For young Marne was an accomplished pianist.

She started studying music when she was 5½ years old, showing great ability at this tender age.

MARNE HAD become "quite disillusioned" with entering music competitions, and if it had not been for Max Walten, who was then head of the music department at San Rafael High, perhaps she never would have auditioned for a Music Chest scholarship. At the time she was studying with George Kruger in San Francisco.

She was also encouraged to enter the Western Educators' Contest in Los Angeles, where, from among 4,160 contestants, she was selected as soloist with the 102-piece San Diego Symphony Orchestra. It was while she was in the southern part of the state, that she received word she had also been awarded a Music Chest scholarship.

"Needless to say, I was thrilled . . . This was another blessing thrown in. As I look back, this experience with the Music Chest not only promoted my musical study, but afforded valuable experience in all sorts of ways."

It was also in 1935 that the Music Chest sponsored a concert at San Rafael High School at which Marne was the featured artist.

REGARDING this event, Marne has this to say, "Maybe some of this experience accounts for the fact that I never felt a burning desire to conquer the world on the concert stage. Instead I realized that I had opportunities right where I happened to be . . . and I have been blessed with much opportunity."

After graduating from San Rafael High School with honors, Marne was one of the youngest students to enter the University of California, where she majored in music and minored in public speaking. She joined the Alpha Mu Music Honor Society, and appeared as a soloist with the university symphony orchestra under the baton of the late Albert Elkus.

Max Walten had impressed upon her the "need for a musician to be practical and well prepared," so Marne obtained her General Secondary Certificate which permitted her to teach a year as a substitute in the Oakland, Berkeley and San Francisco schools. "Band, orchestra, chorus and anything else, I would consent to teach."

SHE THEN decided to enter the "Young Artists" contest sponsored by radio station KGO in San Francisco. She placed third.

Right after obtaining her Bachelor of Arts Degree in college, Marne married Samuel Laidig, a Berkeley attorney. This was in 1940.

"He sang quite a bit at one time, and I keep hoping we can get time to revive his old bass solos and lieder," Mrs. Laidig says.

"All the children seem to be quite musical," she continues. "David now 19, rebelled at piano and clarinet lessons, but sang in several school choruses and appeared in a children's opera; Marcia, 14, shows promise of becoming a fine pianist. Baby Thomas sings constantly. Victoria and Jonathan are also interested in music."

THE LAIDIGS live in Pasadena, where Marne teaches piano and is a member of the Pasadena Music Teachers Assn. and also belongs to a chamber music group. Marne also plays the organ and harpsichord.

Mrs. John Dunlap, Marne's mother, still lives in the family home on Mill Road in Novato.

Marne's younger sister, Sarah, who was an accomplished violinst as a child, is married to Robert Overmeyer. They too live in Novato.

The Marin Music Chest scholarships to talented young people through the years have been made possible through subscriptions to the Music Chest's annual summer concert series. The 1964 subscription drive opens Monday and continues through May 6 with county headquarters located at Hoy's TV and Music Store, 1133 Fourth Street, San Rafael.

FIVE PER CENT of all money subscribed is placed in the scholarship fund; the balance is used for artists' fees. To date, over $25,000 has been awarded in Music Chest scholarships.

Thus subscription to the Marin Music Chest not only brings the greatest artists in the world to Marin County, but also encourages promising young Marin musicians to strive for great heights in their chosen field.

Five dollars covers two tickets to every concert during the 1964 season, mailed in advance; $10, four tickets, etc. Subscriptions of less than $5 entitle subscribers to pay 50 cents admission to each concert upon presentation of subscription card at gates of Forest Meadows, Dominican College, San Rafael. Non-subscribers to the Music Chest summer series are charged $2.50 per person, per concert.

It's An Avenue Of Change And Contrast

San Rafael's Lincoln Is Far Different Street From The Petaluma Road Of Old

COVER PHOTO

FOR 57 years, Frank Griffin has lived in this home at 1515 Lincoln Avenue, San Rafael. It has been his residence since the house was built in 1907 when he was a boy of 7. During his span of years, Griffin has seen many changes including a change of name for the street from Petaluma Road to Lincoln Avenue. And he has seen homes such as his own become fewer and fewer. (Photo by Harry Mathias)

FRANK GRIFFIN looks at one of the newer apartment buildings which are among the many changes that have come to Lincoln Avenue during the 57 years he has lived there. Griffin is a Pacific Gas and Electric Co. employee. He says Lincoln is a far different street from the one he knew as Petaluma Road as a boy—but it is still his street. The deer, quail, open pastures and many of the trees are gone, along with the old homes. But he still finds his house a comfortable dwelling. And he still finds Lincoln Avenue an interesting street. (Independent-Journal photo)

By ANITA MESSIMER

Today it's Lincoln Avenue, heavily-trafficked, and with apartment and office buildings up or going up where fine old homes once stood.

Then it was Petaluma Road, a pleasant residential thoroughfare lined with trees and with a quieter kind of traffic.

Mrs. Marie Sinnott is one of those who remembers very well when San Rafael's Lincoln Avenue was Petaluma Road — and a far different kind of street.

SHE OWNS the building at Lincoln and Linden Lane in which the area's only grocery, the Lincoln Market, is located, and lives in quarters at the rear of the store. As a girl, she lived in her family home at the point where Linden Lane underpass now dips beneath and crosses Highway 101. And she recalls that the street then served as San Rafael's only outlet to North Marin and Sonoma County—hence the name Petaluma Road.

Mrs. Sinnott's mother, Anna-Marie Obitz, owned a small store on the same premises where today's market functions.

And back in those times, much of northern San Rafael was known as the Coleman Addition. The William Coleman house, the store and the Dominican Convent were once the only habitations in a large area. (One of the several homes built by Coleman is now the Bagley Apartments building on Mission Avenue.)

THICK WOODS once bordered Lincoln Avenue, Mrs. Sinnott recalls. She regrets the loss of the trees. But does not complain of the homes, the apartments and the buildings that have replaced the woods.

She recalls as "a most exciting time" for the residents of Petaluma Road-Lincoln Avenue the year 1906 when the earthquake and fire sent refugees pouring out of San Francisco. Many of them camped in a field across the road from Dominican Convent. And Mrs. Sinnott remembers going at night to see the refugees sitting around their fires like gypsies.

There are others still living on Lincoln who remember when the thoroughfare was called Petaluma Road, and when heavy trucks and bumper-to-bumper automobiles did not jam its length at peak traffic times.

FRANK GRIFFIN, for instance, has lived in his house at 1515 Lincoln since it was built in 1907.

He was a boy of but 7 when he first moved into the large frame house which he says is still a comfortable and easily-maintained home.

Of those days five and a half decades ago, Griffin recalls: "Cows used to pasture in what is now our yard. And the deer and quail used to come down out of the hills.

"Brookdale Park across the street, now all homes, was all meadow then, and the kids used to play golf there."

"YES," HE says, "I've seen a lot of changes on this street."

A landmark on Lincoln is the brown shingle Boyd house next door to one of the new apartment buildings. It was built in 1907 by Thomas Boyd's father.

Boyd recalls that the name change from Petaluma Road to Lincoln Avenue was voted by San Rafael councilmen only after considerable controversy.

"People objected, because they thought their mail might be sent to Lincoln, Neb.," Boyd says.

TODAY, Lincoln Avenue is a street of contrasts and changes.

From Second to Fifth it is commercial with service stations, eating places, business places of several kinds.

Beyond Mission, the residential area begins. And here is found the greatest contrast. There are houses little changed from Petaluma Road days except for the television antennas atop their roofs or new sidings. There are homes converted into real estate offices or other commercial purposes. And there are new and modernistic buildings, constructed to house offices or to serve as apartment

EIGHTY YEARS and many, changes separate these two photos of San Rafael's major north-south thoroughfare. It was in the early 1880s when the photo at top, from the Marin Historical Society, was taken. Shown is the intersection of what was then Petaluma Road or Petaluma Avenue and Mission, and it had a distinctly pastoral air then. The Independent - Journal staff photo at bottom shows the street of contrasts that Lincoln Avenue is today. Here at its intersection with Brookdale can be seen both commercial — the motel with restaurant — and residential buildings. But commercial and apartment buildings are gradually replacing the homes which once lined the street.

"Should My Mohair Knit Be Dry Cleaned?"

I regret to say that mohair knitwear cannot be drycleaned or laundered safely. Even with the most careful hnadling, it is subject to severe shrinkage because of (1) its soft wool fiber characteristics (2) its loose knit construction, and (3) failure to pre-shrink the fabric.

Mohair knitwear is a luxurious, high-style fabric. It has the same soft texture as cashmere and angora, as you well know. However, this fabric is suspectible to holes and snags during normal wear. Where the fabric is especially fleecy, matting may result from normal wear.

The luxury appeal of mohair knitwear makes it especially desirable, yet its serviceability is very limited as far as customer satisfaction is concerned.

Naturally, you want your garment cleansed, yet your professional drycleaner should accept it only at your risk. No matter how carefully he handles it, it may shink severely.

Stereo Hi-Fi

By C. J. Catania
Audio Engineer

We have just received some very important news concerning FM station KPEN. The letter to us begins, "By the time you read this letter, we at KPEN hope to have begun transmitting the most exciting new technical advancement in FM Radio since we pioneered FM Multiplex Stereo in 1961!" They claim that this is a new transmission technique which they call VERTI-POWER.

As yet, I do not know the exact theory behind the new technique, but KPEN claims that, "The KPEN maximum power signal of 120,000 watts will now sweep down over vertical obstructions—over hills, into valleys, behind buildings—bringing a clear, clean signal."

A telephone call to the station this date advised us that VERTI-POWER went into effect at KPEN on March 26th. Since many of our locations in Marin are badly affected by hills, this new transmitting technique may enable some of these shaded locations to receive clear FM stereo. We here at Catania Sound as well as the staff at KPEN are anxious to know about the improvement in reception in any of Marin's weak reception areas. If you notice an improvement in the clearness of your regular or stereo reception from KPEN, please drop in and tell us about it, or call us on the telephone, or send us a post card.

Generally, FM signals (like TV signals) are limited to line-of-sight. If a receiving station is located behind a hill, or large building, or obstacle from the transmitter, very little signal will reach the antenna via the direct path. Sometimes these locations receive signals bounced off from another mountain or hill. If only one bounce, and not several bounces from different hills are received, the reflected type signal may be satisfactory; however, this type of reception usually varies from day to day. If several signals are received from bounces, the reception will be fuzzy and distorted due to the arrival of the signals at slightly different times. This is called multipath, and is quite a problem in many areas of Marin.

KPEN's new VERTI-POWER may be a big help to some of us. Tune to their station, 101.3 on the FM dial and give us a report. If you have not been able to get satisfactory reception from this pioneer FM station, and you find that VERTI-POWER now makes reception possible, you will discover KPEN to be a delightful and thoroughly enjoyable station.

NOT EVERYTHING along San Rafael's Lincoln Avenue has changed. The Independent-Journal photo at bottom shows the same corner today—still the location of a neighborhood market.

Street Of Contrasts

The Old And New Mingle On Lincoln

ALL ALONG LINCOLN AVENUE today, the old rubs shoulders with the new. For example, this long-standing dwelling and its neighbor, a modern apartment building. But the old homes, still impressive in their way, are becoming fewer and fewer through the years, as they give way to new apartments, office buildings, commercial establishments, motels, etc. The whole personality of the busy San Rafael street has undergone a change—and the change is continuing at an ever-accelerating pace. homes.

Only a short distance apart are the old Victorian mansion built by railroad magnate Peter Donahue and later owned by the famed inventor Leon Douglass, now the property of the First Baptist Church, and the new Tudor-style Lincoln-Maple Building, most handsome of the new structures fronting the street.

The Colonial Motel with its white colonnades, perched on a hill overlooking the street, is another eye-catcher, but one which seems to blend the past — its style — with the present—its actual age.

THERE ARE tourists traveling and staying at a Lincoln Avenue motel only overnight. And there are the Frank Griffins and the Marie Sinnotts who have lived there for generations. And there is traffic, traffic, traffic.

It is a street of contrasts—contrast between past and present, and contrast in the variety of its present-day usages. And in the future, the widening of Highway 101, which parallels it, will trigger still another wave of changes along Lincoln.

A LANDMARK along Lincoln Avenue is the Thomas Boyd home, at top, a large brown-shingle dwelling built in 1907. And representative of the best of the newer construction along the busy San Rafael street is the Lincoln-Maple Building, lower photo, constructed in Tudor style and housing the San Geronimo Valley Country Club headquarters and other offices. Story Of A Fabulous Family, And Their Industrial Dynasty

By DON KEOWN

Wealth alone does not guarantee interesting biographical subjects. But add color, contradiction and controversy, and you have the makings of a lively and entertaining book.

New York newspaperman William H. A. Carr has all this and considerably more going for him in his subjects for his "The Du Ponts of Delaware: A Fantastic Dynasty."

The word "fantastic" is hardly an overstatement.

Some 160 years ago the first members of the family came to the United States, fleeing the civil strife of France virtually penniless. They settled on the Brandywine River and began manufacturing black powder. This was the beginning of a clan and industrial empire which today totals 1,600 members with an aggregate wealth of three billion dollars. The du Ponts are richer than the Rockefellers.

Carr tells the story of this remarkable family from its French origins to the present day, and tells it well.

He first introduces you to Pierre Samuel du Pont, the patriarch who was an internationally-recognized authority on economics and yet incapable of managing his own finances, and his two sons, Eleuthere Irenee du Pont and Victor Marie du Pont. It was the sons, particularly the extraordinary Eleuthere Irenee, who were responsible for seeing the new powder plant through stormy beginnings so that it could survive and grow into the mammoth E. I. du Pont de Nemours and Co., Inc. of today.

The story of the du Ponts is also a story of close family ties including many cousin marriages, yet of bitter intra-family feuds; it is a story of colorful individuals — war heroes, men elected to high office and aspiring to still higher, brilliant executives and scientists, crusaders and non-conformists, haughty aristocrats and warm humanitarians; it is a story of scandals and philanthropies.

And most of all, it is the story of an industrial empire that grew and grew and grew. Not even governmental action could stop its growth. And while the epithet "merchants of death" was sometimes hurled at the munitions-making du Ponts, they were also hailed as great patriots for supplying their country with the weapons necessary for defense and victory.

Carr manages to remain neutral in stance through most of his book. But when he gets to the modern-day du Ponts, his partisanship shows through. It is not so much that he defends the du Ponts against their critics, as the manner in which he does it. All caution is cast aside.

But read Carr here for his facts, not his conclusions.

And basically Carr seems on firm ground when he contends that, on the whole, the du Ponts have acquitted themselves for better toward society than big American industry on the whole. Most du Ponts have been people of conscience. The corporate record is somewhat more blemished than Carr paints it. But far worse ones have brought other great concerns less public approbrium.

THE DU PONTS OF DELAWARE by William H. A. Carr, Dodd, Mead and Co., 368 pages, $6.95.

TIBURON RESIDENT William Kelley, who enjoyed success with his "Gemini" in 1959, has authored a new major novel entitled "The God Hunters." Again he probes the status of spirituality in the world today.

A REDHEAD FOR MIKE SHAYNE by Brett Halliday, Dodd, Mead and Co., 184 pages, $3.50. Reviewed by Don Keown.

Brett Halliday has written his best Mike Shayne yarn in some time in his "A Redhead for Mike Shayne."

There's the standard tough guy talk, hard drinking, passes at beautiful women — always interrupted before they can be completed—and violent action. All this, Shayne fans have learned to expect.

But in his 48th case, the Miami "private eye" is confronted with an unusually challenging problem—tracing the origin of some very deadly automatic Russian-made handguns that suddenly appear in the Florida underworld. The Cuban situation is worked into the plot. Like all Shayne stories, it's fast reading. But there is considerable more substance to this one than most.

Marinite's Novel

THE GOD SEEKERS by William Kelley, Simon and Schuster, 541 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Barbara Hosmer.

The clash of their mother's exhorbitant religious fervor and their actor-father's strong iconoclasm provides forces for the wild verbal "holy wars" which tear at the twin sons, Aubrey and Arnie Strycker, in Marinite William Kelley's second novel.

With their sister already secure in holy orders, both boys have sought escape from the ceaseless conflict by entering the seminary. Kelley, as in his previous novel, "Gemini," is concerned with the nature of spirituality and the forces in today's world that tear at it.

Aubrey's twin, Arnie, has left the seminary after outbursts that finally become schizophrenic — yet his moments of clarity prick the conscience of his brother, the would-be priest.

With the dramatic father's wide-screen heroics and convert mother's religious exhortations, one urges Aubrey to hold onto the world, the other to achieve a glorious superficial success in the church, and, throughout, the white-hot sensuality of his new stepsister beats down on him and the mad ravings of the brother pull at his conscience.

Verbal thunder and lightning carry through most of this long novel and, nearing the end, the reader can understand Aubrey's wish to escape to the austere desert order of the Saharan Fathers —in fact the serenity of holy orders, be they Sahara or Gobi, might seem a welcome refuge.

William Kelley, whose first novel was a best-seller, lives in Tiburon with his wife and daughter.

For The Retired

101 WAYS TO ENJOY YOUR LEISURE, a Retirement Council publication, Harper and Row, 126 pages, $4.50. Reviewed by Frank Farrara.

Although slanted toward those in retirement or about to retire, this book is a comprehensive guide to activity for anyone who has leisure time.

The theory is stressed that leisure is different than recreation; in essence, a way of living that can be an end in itself.

Leisure-time activities, some costly and some not-too costly and some more active than others, are laid out before the reader much as a box of sample chocolates in the hope that he will find one to his liking.

In view of the increasing number of persons in their retirement years, the publication of this guide is well-timed. It just might give an idea to someone who doesn't know what he's going to do after he quits working for a living.

Compassionate Tale

THE NIGHT IN LISBON by Erich Marie Remarque, Harcourt, Brace and World, 244 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Frank Farrara.

The often-told tale of refugees fleeing from wartime Germany is unfolded in a new vein, rich in philosophy with a smattering of mysticism.

The suspense, romance and tragedy of one couple's escape to Lisbon at the outset of World War II provides the plot.

Remarque writes with a knowledge and compassion that he absorbed when he fled Germany as the Nazis came to power.

Beyond this, there is a probing of the meaning of events and their effects upon the minds and spirits of men. There is an emphasis on introspection which lends depth to the characters. Perhaps, the author is just revealing new insights he has gained, in retrospect, since the end of the war.

Remarque wisely confines his story to the lives of one couple. Intimate, stirring and soul-searching, it is more effective than a flat case history of a refugee and more revealing than works covering the same territory with a broader scope.

A Study Of Group Workers And The Ones They Help

THOSE WHO CARE by Laura Nelson Baker, published by Little, Brown, 260 pages, $4.50. Reviewed by Jean Lyttle.

Author Laura Nelson Baker of Lagunitas has written here an absorbing account of the role that group work plays in modern day efforts to solve major social problems.

Written in two sections, the first describes who is being helped through group work. Starting with delinquent children at juvenile hall, then going to emotionally disturbed children in residential treatment centers, patients in mental hospitals, and ending with the problems faced by older people, we are shown how each group is helped in different ways.

The second section describes the organizations which work with groups. The earlier ones being Jane Adams' Hull House, then Lillian Wald's Henry Street Settlement House and Andover House in Boston, all of which were the forerunners of today's community centers. Programs for youth, Scouting, Camp Fire Girls, the YWCA and YMCA, are all increasing their work with these groups.

The book is dedicated to one "who was born caring," in the belief that it will help in the self-discovery of many more.

Interesting for the reader with such a career in mind are the newest opportunities in group work existing in the Peace Corps, the American Friends Service Committee, and the World Council of Churches.

IN STEP with the present trend in humor is "Bennett Cerf's Book of Animal Riddles," a Random House Beginner Book for the little ones. Sample riddle: What is a good way to keep a dog off the street? Answer: Put him in a barking lot. Roy McKie's illustrations are lively and full of color. The one above is from the cover of the book. Kids never seem to tire of these kind of riddles.

New Reading For The Children

Recommended reading for the young, younger and youngest readers:

One of America's most remarkable engineering feats, "The Erie Canal," is the subject of the newest book in the American Heritage Junior Library Series ($3.95). Ralph K. Andrist has written the story of the digging of the 363-mile-long ditch starting in 1817 with its complicated system of locks, of its opening in 1825, and of its economic influence in the years that followed. American Heritage has illustrated the book with 132 paintings and early photographs, 50 of which are in color. The pastoral scenes are unusually beautiful. And the volume is another excellent example of how American Heritage makes history palatable and even inspiring for young readers without sugar-coating the facts.

A colorful chronicle of hats is presented in William Jay Smith's "Ho for a Hat." (Atlantic-Little Brown, $3.25). Gay verses and bright simple pictures, boldly illustrated by Ivan Chermayeff, will appeal to readers, 7 to 12 years old, and will convince anyone that hats are fun.

The story of a "plain" hound dog, who is anything but plain, is told in "Daddles" by Ruth Sawyer (Little, Brown and Co., 100 pages, $3.50). Daddles is the right kind of a dog for two bright youngsters, Peterkin and Snoodie, who are spending a summer in Maine. The author captures the special happiness of children and dogs, and the charm of Maine and its people. Children from 9 to 13 will enjoy the well-told story and the lively black and white illustrations by Robert Frankenburg.

"The Limerick Trick" by Scott Corbett (Atlantic-Little, Brown, $3) will delight the 8-to-12-year-old readers with the latest adventures of Kerby and his friends. These same boys have appeared in three other books, "The Lemonade Trick," "The Mailbox Trick" and "The Disappearing Dog Trick." In the "Limerick Trick," author Corbett again shows how well he understands the way boys feel, act and talk. Paul Galdone, at the drawing board, adds much to this hilarious tale.

For pre-readers and even pre-talkers is Ed Emberley's "Cock-A-Doodle-Doo" (Little, Brown, $2.50). It's a book of sounds—the "woof" of a dog, the "meeow" of a cat, etc.—, and the little ones should love it. The pictures are simple and intriguing. And author-illustrator Emberley says he pre-tested his work with his one youngest son, and that little Michael was delighted with it all.

SPRING SNEAKERS

And then one day it was Spring.
It was, like ants, in everything.
For instance, Mom counted out the money
For my annual pair of sneakers;
Bought in April, worn through by Labor Day.
I would blame my new sneakers,
Trying to explain away the weightlessness
Of a sunny morning after winter let go.
"You see, Mom, it's this funny-looking
White spots on the sole
That let's you jump higher," I'd say.
I could touch higher on apartment house
Brick wall than I could last May,
Forgetting it was me that was growing upward,
And that all too soon sneakers
Would be only a casual affair.
But Spring is like that.
It makes you forget.
A roll in new grass or barefoot
Across a stream
Bringing the only relief.

The Culinary Treats Of Three Cultures

Three newly - published cookbooks represent widely diversified areas on the culinary map.

"The Israeli Cook Book" is part of Crown Publishers' International Cook Book Series and has been compiled by Molly Lyons Bar-David, a much-traveled citizen of Israel who served as food adviser to El Al Airlines. She is also a columnist for Israeli newspapers and magazines.

Her book contains 700 recipes reflecting the varied backgrounds of the people who have come to the Holy Land to make their home. These importations from many lands have been subjected to the variations necessary to meet the special requirements of the Jewish kitchens. And the result has been a new and unusual cuisine with an appeal all its own. The historical background material provided for many of the dishes adds a special interest.

In these United States, Maryland has long held and merited a reputation for flavorful cooking. From Government House in Annapolis, Helen Avalynne Tawes, wife of the governor, has put together "My Favorite Maryland Recipes," which should serve to further enhance that prestige of her state for fine dining. Terrapin, oysters, turkey, clams, corn pudding, chowder, ham, all the other delicacies for which the state is known, plus some lesser-known ones including cooked muskrat, are to be found in its pages.

"The Grand-Manner Cookbook" is subtitled "Edwardian Glamour Cooking" and was first published in England by Hugh Evelyn, Ltd. Now Stephen Greene Press has made this unusual book by Oswell Blakeston, a student of English cookery when Edward reigned, available in the U. S. It is billed as a practical book, providing recipes modified for present - day kitchens. But its major attraction lies in its role of transmitting the flavor and customs of a colorful era which took its eating seriously. Especially good is the discussion of general Edwardian techniques in cooking—use of pestle and mortar, moulds, garnishes, etc. Illustrations by Elizabeth Beerbohm add to the air of period charm.

THE ISRAELI COOK BOOK by Molly Lyons Bar-David, Crown Publishers, 442 pages, $4.95.

MY FAVORITE MARYLAND RECIPES by Mrs. J. Millard Tawes, Random House, 179 pages, $3.95.

THE GRAND - MANNER COOKBOOK by Oswell Blakeston, Stephen Green Press, 61 pages, $3.50. Reviewed by Maxine Keown.

THE STEREO SCENE

Some New Jazz By Monk And Wes

By JOHN SUNIER

TWO HOURS WITH THELONIOUS — European concerts by the Thelonious Monk Quartet — Riverside Stereo 9460/9461:

This limited edition double-disc album was taped during 1961 at concert appearances in theaters in both Milan and Paris. Charlie Rouse is heard on tenor, John Ore on bass and Frankie Dunlop on drums. Nearly all of the tunes have already been recorded by Thelonious, but these are his latest views of the highly original compositions, and recorded under the added impetus of live audience appearances.

Two of the tunes, "Jackieing" and "Rhythm-a-ning," are heard in two different tracks in this same album. The comparisons are most interesting. There are also three solo piano tracks by Thelonious himself.

My favorite Monk tune, if I would be forced to choose one, would be "Crepescule with Nellie," which was used in the soundtrack of the French film, "Liaisons Dangereuses." The famous "Epistrophy" opens and closes the exciting album—a must for every Monk fan.

BOSS GUITAR: Wes Montgomery — Riverside Stereo RS 9459:

One of the best of the new guitarists, who performed widely here in the Bay Area, and briefly operated a Berkeley jazz club. His technique is formidable in both single-string and chordal styles. Mel Rhyne's organ and Jimmy Cobb's drums provide accompaniment.

Most of the eight tunes are standards.

THE ROLAND KIRK QUARTET MEETS THE BENNY GOLSON ORCHESTRA— Mercury Stereo SR 60844:

Kirk, you will remember, is the reeds player who jams the several instruments at once into his month and goes.

On this new lp for Mercury he plays with his quartet on one side, and on the flip side is paired with the Benny Golson big band for some of the diggin'-est modern jazz this corner has ever heard.

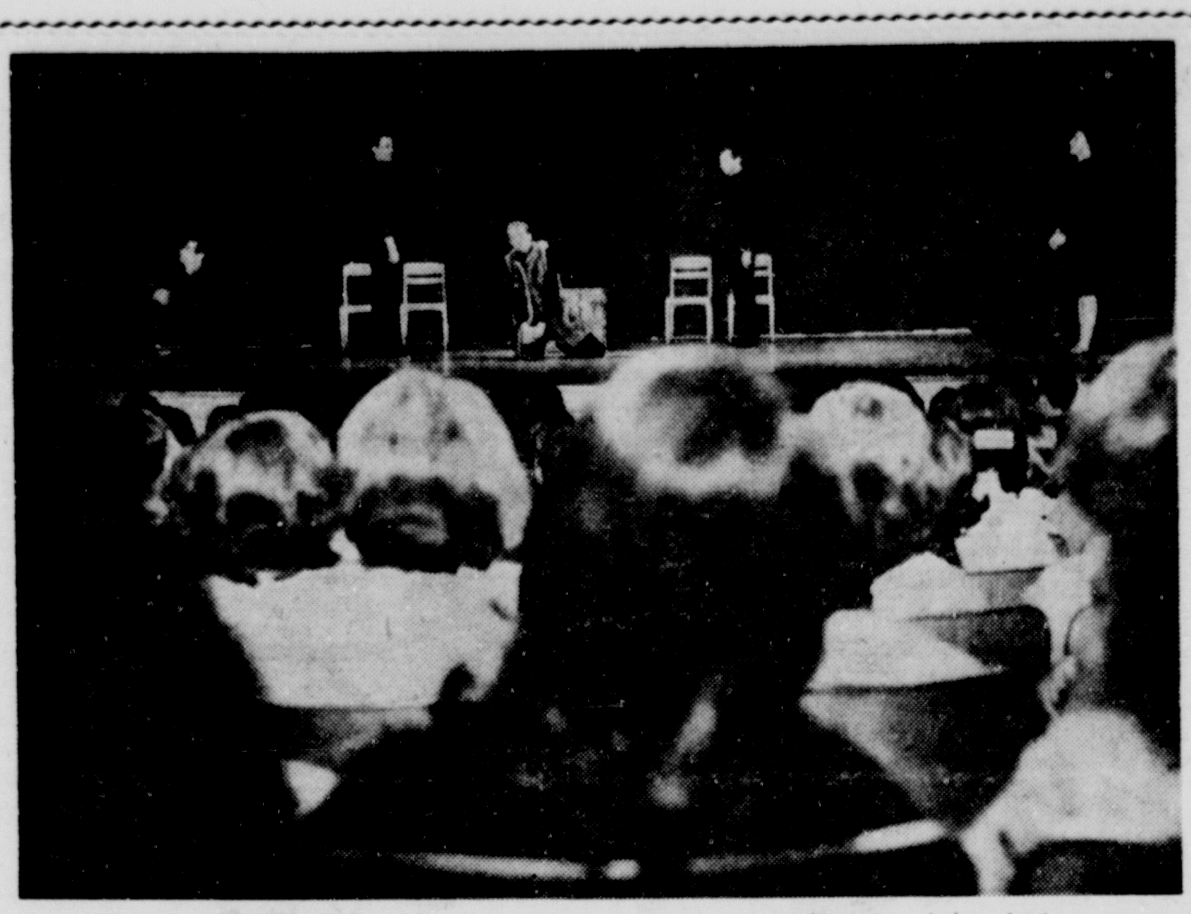
Six of the 10 tunes are Kirk originals and one is a Charlie Mingus. There are ballads, too, as witness the strich solo on "April Morning," a magical sort of sound.

STEEL GUITAR JAZZ — Buddie Emmons — Mercury Stereo SR 60843:

Another result of the infiltration of the country and Western idiom into jazz.

I doubt if the electric instrument will be any more than an oddity in jazz, but this is not a bad collection of tunes at all. Emmons is a fine guitarist and he is ably assisted by Bobby Scott on piano and Jerome Richardson's sax.

If one can keep the idea of Hawaiian music or Grand Old Opry out of one's mind while listening to Emmons, this can be a most enjoyable lp.



A HIGH SCHOOL PROGRAM initiated a year ago by San Francisco's famed Actor's Workshop will make its second visit of 1964 to Marin County when the company appears in comedy scenes from the classical theater at Terra Linda High School next Thursday afternoon. Pictured above are actors and actresses as they performed earlier this year at Redwood High School. Purpose of the program, according to Jules Irving, managing editor of the workshop, is to bring professional classical theater to teenagers in Northern California. Last year, some 37,000 students watched the programs. Plans are to broaden the coverage of Marin schools in the future. David B. Devine of the workshop staff coordinates the high school program. The Garden In April

Conscientious Green-Thumber Will Have No Trouble Keeping Busy This Month

When setting out young plants, have the ground moist but not wet. Firm them in well and water so that the soil settles well around the roots. Then for the first few days after planting syringe the tops lightly to help keep the leaves fresh. When you see signs of new growth start your regular garden care.

Most shrubs and larger items will benefit from one of the transplant solutions just before or just after moving the plants. A nurseryman will have several to choose from. The transplant mixture helps them get over the shock of moving quickly and than can make a big difference.

When the weather warms up it is time to think of vegetables. Still too early to set out pepper or tomato plants or any of the melons except in a very few highly favored spots, but you can plant seeds of lettuce, chard, carrots, beets — whatever you like best. But do be sure to grow some of your own vegetables.

This is a good time to get your garden equipment in shape if it isn't already because this month and next are the biggest planting months of all. Check your fertilizer spreading chart (it's useful for seeding lawns, too); your power mower, shears, and any other such equipment that may be in need of repair or replacement. You should check your nursery for any new equipment that might be on hand that will make gardening the complete pleasure it can be.

Sweetpeas can go in now. Remember they like a layer of manure worked into the soil about 18 inches down. Then cover with more soil. You plant the sweetpeas about two inches deep and run the rows north and south for best results. It is important that you have a trellis ready by the time the shoots come up because you want the growth to continue unchecked.

When that lily you got for Easter goes out of bloom, plant it in the garden. It will go on and on for many years if you give it a place with good drainage where its blooms can look at the sun.

Shasta Daisies can be left alone for three years or so, but for best results you should lift them each year and divide the clumps into small plants. This way you not only get plenty of plants but better blooms as well.

Roses will be shooting up and some of the new shoots may not be going where you want them to — but instead crossing through the bush and tangling with other branches. Cut out the offending shoots. When you pick your roses always cut to a bud pointed "out," so the new growth will be toward the outside, not the inside of the bush.

April is the critical month for lawns. What you do now in the way of feeding, weeding and watering may well determine just what kind of a lawn you will have this summer. Special care and attention now will pay off in reduced labor and improved appearance through the months to come.

BILLED AS THE first "sun-tolerant" camellia ever achieved is the new Camellia Flirtation. The sun-hardy plant is a development of Armstrong Nurseries. It is a vigorous cross of the big-flowered japonica with the sun-resistant salunensis. The result is a robust, beautifully-foliaged ornamental that thrives in full sun where camellias have previously feared to tread.

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

- Once more we remind you, prune your fuchsias and geraniums. They will start to grow again very soon if not immediately, at which time you can start giving plant food.
- As the early-flowering Iris, Christmas Roses and other perennials go out of bloom, lift them and divide.
- Now is the time to plant your tuberous and fibrous begonias seedlings. Give them some shade in hotter areas.
- How about some "fresh from the garden" vegetables this summer? Your nurseryman has a good selection of plants already started for you.
- Keep weeds removed and don't let them go to seed.

THE GENEROUS LIVING ROOM in this D. M. Christensen Construction Co.-built home at Peacock Gap is central, with the bedrooms in the south wing and the kitchen, family room and rumpus room in the north wing. The main entrance to the home, left, is visually open to a front garden. Timbered ceilings and a massive field stone fireplace with semi-raised hearth give the feeling of a hunting lodge on a grand scale.

Marin Living With The Golf Fairway For A Backyard

The first American golf courses were laid out on private estates, and began and concluded in close proximity to the home of the landowner.

This was practical when a very select group of sportsmen gathered for golf. How large this group has grown cannot be calculated with any degree of accuracy, but a 1957 survey showed 5,553 golf courses and the total has zoomed since then.

The desire to live close to the course continues with variations. Public courses are bordered by residences, and private or membership-owned clubs often have residences situated along their entire length. Not only does it make participation convenient, but the living space is unlimited.

Peacock Gap is one good example of this arrangement. The homes are designed for those who like to live outside as much as practical, and to have their inside living space designed to become part of the outdoors on the slightest provocation.

The home pictured on these pages is beside the 15th fairway at Peacock Gap. It was built by the D. M. Christensen Construction Co. for the Lewis J. Hall Jr. family.

Hall, a U.S. Steel executive, was recently transferred to Southern California, and his interests are represented by Fox and Carskadon Realtors at their Peacock Gap office.

It is a California ranch style home with four bedrooms, and it has a total of 2,600 square feet of living space.

Estimated value: $55,000 to $60,000.

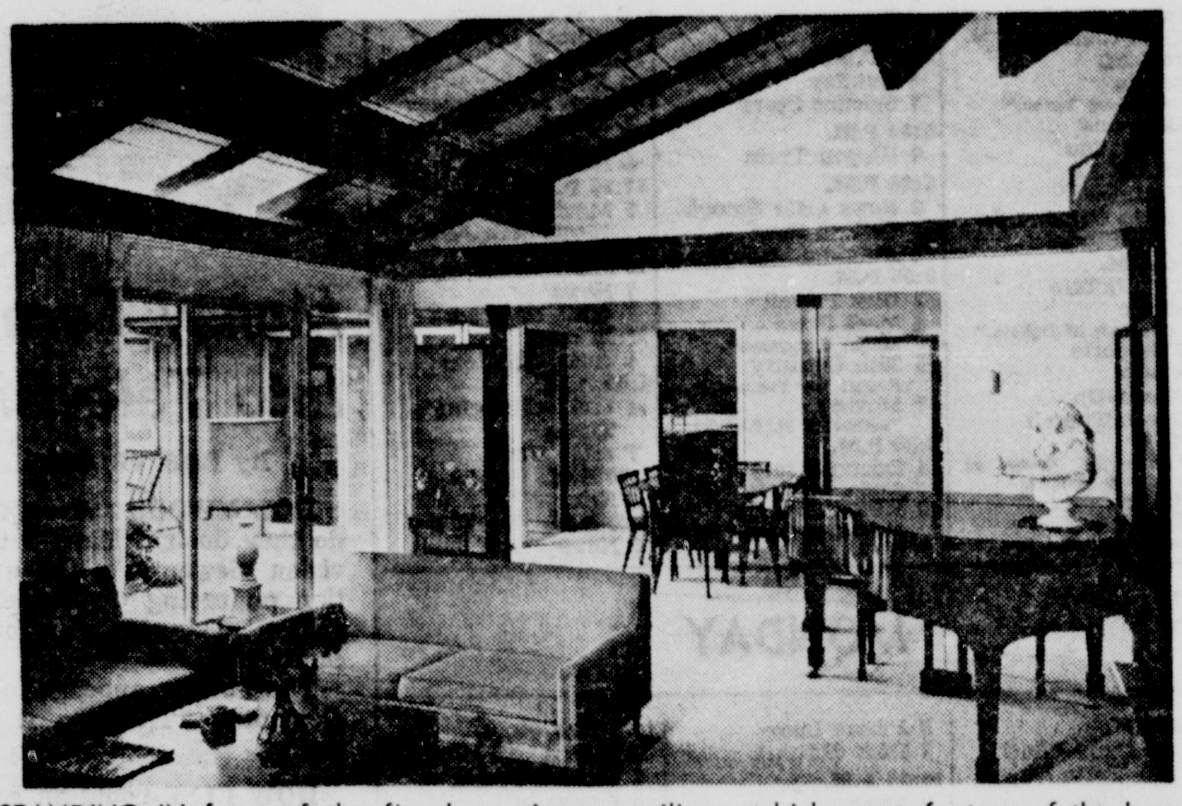
THE UNIQUE FIREPLACE, which is useful as well as ornamental, is the feature of the rumpus room of the Hall home. Finished in oak, the uncluttered walls contrast with the sound-proofed tiled ceiling and the gaily-colored tile floor. Wicker back stools at the breakfast counter and the wooden firkin wastebasket against the far wall add verity to the term "rumpus."

THE LARGE family room, glimpsed through the kitchen door, center, is the favorite lounging area. The kitchen is all-electric with mahogany finished cabinets.



STANDING IN front of the fireplace pictured on page M-16, sliding glass doors open out to a formal rear patio that joins the "rough' beside the 15th fairway of Peacock Gap. Here details of the open beam ceilings, which are a feature of the home design, are most evident. The massive cross beams are stained black to contrast with the wash white tongue-and-groove above.

Money Turns Name Actors Into Television Pitchmen

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "Why do they do it?" Many a television viewer asks the question on seeing distinguished actors making a pitch on a commercial.

The answer appears to be elemental. They do it for money.

HOW ELSE could an actor earn $50,000 for one day's work? Advertisers will pay that much for top names.

Take the example of Edward G. Robinson. He remains one of Hollywood's most employed actors. Yet he can be seen all over the television channels savoring and praising an instant coffee.

Two other noted stars, Barbara Stanwyck and Claudette Colbert, are also promoting the same product.

ROBINSON explains: "I hesitated about accepting the offer at first. I had never done anything that commercial, not even when I had my own radio show, 'Big Town.' But I saw nothing wrong in it—as long as the ad was in good taste and I believed in the article that was being sold.

"The remuneration was very good, and that is always a consideration. Everything was done with care. Three or four men came out from New York to supervise the filming. A replica of my den was made at a studio complete with some of my paintings. The shooting required a full day. All in all, it was a pleasant experience."

The use of well-known actors in commercials has been increasing. Some performers with instantly recognizable faces—Joe E. Brown, Buster Keaton, etc.—do their selling unbilled. Others get credit for their names and, as added incentive, the movie or television series they are appearing in.

SOME STARS are paid a flat fee for their work, others receive a payment for each play. This can amount to big money, even for unknown performers. One actress, who has failed to make a name for herself in the dramatic realm, has earned $20,000 a year from a soap commercial.

There are some who believe that it is undignified for stars to sell products. Spencer Tracy, Cary Grant and others have turned down fabulous offers for commercials.

Channel Notes

Comedian Jack Carter, who is seen frequently on American television variety shows, will tape two programs for the British Broadcasting Corp.'s "International Cabaret" series in London in May.

It's back to NBC if you want to watch Alfred Hitchcock's thrillers next season. Hitchcock started his television shows on CBS in 1955 and stayed there until 1960 when he moved to NBC for two seasons. In 1962-63 and 1963-64, he was back at CBS, expanding the half-hour format to an hour. NBC also will give him an hour in the fall, at 10 p.m. Mondays.

NBC has renewed "That Was the Week That Was" for next season. The current series will end July 10. After a 10-week hiatus, the show will return Sept. 22 to be aired each Tuesday at 9:30 p.m. It is now seen at 9:30 Fridays.

The new opera by Gian-Carlo Menotti that CBS commissioned in 1962 will have its American premiere on the network as a one-hour special some time during the 1964-65 season. "Martin's Lie" is the title, and its world premiere will be June 3 in Bristol Cathedral, Bristol, England, as part of the Bath Festival. That production will be videotaped in Bristol for the CBS presentation. The opera concerns the dramatic choice a little boy must make between truth and love.

Comedian Bob Newhart has been signed by CBS to be one of the regulars on its one-hour variety series, "The Entertainers," which will start in the fall.

IT DOESN'T SEEM so very long ago that Brandon De Wilde was the little boy seen at left in his performance in the film classic, "Shane." Today he's an adult performer, and will appear as seen at right as a motorcyclist in "The Greatest Show on Earth" on KGO-TV Tuesday at 9 p. m. Jack Palance, the regular star of the TV circus series, also appeared in the 1952 western movie "Shane."
